PREFACE.

"Quod si deficiant vires, audacia certe Laus erit; in magnis voluisse sat est."

THE full and interesting Introduction from the pen of one of the most distinguished members of the family now living, leaves but little to be said by the Compiler. He forbears to consume the time of the reader by detailing the difficulties which have attended the preparation of the work. The time he has devoted to it may be measured by years. The correspondence would fill volumes; to say nothing of journeys, searches and personal examinations in books, in grave-yards, and in the flesh. It is due to himself to state that he must add his own to the complaints of all genealogists, that letters of inquiry, and appeals for information, have been met with an indifference and neglect that argue unfavorably for the courtesy or family pride of too many of the name. To this cause he refers most of the incompleteness that is to be found in the work; and it would be a source of permanent discomfort to him if he had not the hope, that the sight of the book itself may inspire many with a desire to furnish information they have hitherto withheld, and to provide him with material for a supplementary volume he meditates, which he trusts will correct all errors, and supply all omissions, of the present. He does not consider his work finished as it stands.

While the Compiler is conscious of no self-reproach for lack of patience in the preparation of the book, he confesses that it has been hurried in the publication. He has, in fact, delayed his departure from the country to allow himself to print what he had collected and prepared, in order to secure it against loss or dispersion in his absence. This haste excludes from the present volume the Military Roll of the family — a proud one — and certain other tabular statements, for which abundant material exists, and most of which he has collected.

If some of the kindred have exhibited less interest in the enterprise than proper family feeling ought to have excited, others have extended a cooperation so zealous and effective as to burden the Compiler with obligation. He takes pleasure in specially acknowledging the valuable assistance he has received from Hon. Erastus C. Benedict of New York, Rev. Nathan D. Benedict of Bridgeport, Deacon Andrew L. Benedict of Bethel, William Northrop Benedict of Ridgefield, Ct., and Isaac Hoyt Benedict of Washington, D. C.

Henry C. Ryder, Esq., of Danbury, Ct., bound to the family by no tie of blood or affinity, has, nevertheless, rendered aid to the work that entitles him to grateful mention.

EXPLANATORY.

Figures of two sizes will be observed in the left hand margin of the pages. At birth each child that subsequently becomes the head of a family is numbered by figures of the smaller size, and when taken up as the head of a family, receives the same number, but in figures of the larger size. Thus, on page 76 will be found Henry, numbered 125 in the smaller figures, and having become a father he reappears on page 124 with the same number, but in figures of the larger size. Still other smaller figures will be found above and at the right hand of names of heads of families. These denote the respective generation to which each name belongs, counting from Thomas, the first of the name in this country; thus: Henry[6] (John,[5] Nathaniel,[4] John,[3] John,[2] Thomas[1]), means that Henry of the 6th generation was the son of John of the 5th, who was son of Nathaniel of the 4th, who was son of John of the 3d, who was son of John of the 2d, who was son of Thomas of the 1st.

The abbreviations used are: b., born; bap., baptized; ch., child or children; coll., college; d., died; dau., daughter; m., married; grad., graduate or graduated; res., resides, resided, or residence; wid., widow.

When the name of the state is omitted, that of New York is understood, except in the case of the familiar Connecticut towns, like Norwalk, Ridgefield, Ridgebury, New Canaan, Bethel, Danbury, etc.

The above applies to both Vol. I & Vol. II.

INTRODUCTION.

MORE than forty years ago I began with zeal to collect materials for the Benedict genealogy. After a few years came active professional life and, also, some discouragements, which compelled me to neglect the work without abandoning the idea of ultimate publication, till two years since, when the author of this book entered upon the same work. With great satisfaction I placed my materials at his service, and he has ever since pursued his object with the intelligence, industry, perseverance and success which the pages of this work show. My grateful acknowledgment for his labor in a common cause, would not permit me to deny his request that I would write an introduction to his interesting volume.

When I say interesting, it will of course be understood that I am speaking only to our little family, on a family matter. The outside world will please consider that it is none of their affair, and we are not bound to interest them. We may get ourselves together in our own way and in our own time, and fill up our family record and album without apology. We have a right to be kindly affectioned one to another. We are blood relations, and like all well constituted families we are a mutual admiration society, and no one can complain while we keep our mutual admiration within our own little circle, and do not sound a trumpet before us as the hypocrites do to be seen of men.

Surely we may look in our glass in our own room. In all these dead generations we see ourselves. They are our family mirror.

Benedict.

The name is derived from the Latin benedictus, blessed, well spoken of. Though unknown as a proper name in the Latin, it is common, as such, in those languages of modern Europe which are derived from the Latin, or are, from the prevalence of the Romish religion, sprinkled with Roman derivatives — Benedict, English and German, Benedek, Austrian, Benedetto, Italian, Bendito, Spanish and Portuguese, Benoit, French, and many other derivative forms. It undoubtedly became a proper name from the ancient custom of adding to, or substituting for a family name some striking individual characteristic, or the name of some patron saint. This custom prevailed extensively in the Romish church, and does to this day. The members of religious houses usually take a new name on taking their vows, and the popes often take descriptive names, as Pius, Innocent, &c. Benedict is accordingly found in all those languages, first as the name of an ecclesiastic; and the known custom of giving to children the names of persons distinguished in religion would soon secularize the name.

The first that illustrated the name was St. Benedict, an Italian hermit of great holiness and austerity, who about the year 520 and afterwards, wrought miracles and was canonized. He built twelve monasteries, and established the monkish order of the Benedictines, so famous all over Europe.

The order of St. Benedict has been one of the most illustrious in the Roman Catholic church, being distinguished for the number of great men, saints, writers, men of learning, of piety and of high literary and moral culture, and persons worthy to be elevated to the thrones of the churches, which they have governed with great wisdom and probity.

Two hundred years ago the Benedictine list reached forty popes, two hundred cardinals, fifty patriarchs, one hundred and sixteen archbishops, forty-six hundred bishops, four emperors, twelve empresses, forty-six kings, forty-one queens and thirty-six hundred canonized saints. No one can doubt that the high qualities of the order have been preserved and perpetuated, if not improved, by their love for their patron saint and his excellent name. The name has by no means lost its power in our day. When I desired to be admitted with my wife to visit the beautiful cloisters of the order attached to that glorious temple of the living God at Rome, the church of St. Paul without the walls, some rule, I do not now remember what, excluded us, but on presenting my card, with the remark that we were Benedicts, the custodian, with a significant smile, threw open the door and we entered and gratified our curiosity.

The Abbe de Benedictis, the distinguished secretary of Cardinal Mazarin and his agent, and the agent of France at the court of Rome, made himself famous by his skill and taste in pomps and funeral honors, by the ceremonies got up by himself in honor of the cardinal and of the queen of France, of which full accounts were published. Fourteen popes, scattered all along from the year 574 to 1740, have taken the name of Benedict, on taking the triple crown. In England, the name was made famous by a noble Saxon abbot, in the year 640 and afterwards, who founded two monasteries, and introduced great improvements in architecture and the polite arts. He too was canonized. In Denmark, the prodigies of bravery performed by Benedict, the brother of Canute IV, in defending the king, his brother, covered the name with honor. The list of eminent men who have borne the name in some of its forms, in all Christian countries might be largely extended.

There is no difficulty in finding glory enough for the name in past ages. It is not so easy, however, to appropriate enough of that glory to light up the humbler story of those in whose veins has run the blood of the Benedicts in America. Nor would I trace them to those old world saints. The bones of the good old ministers and deacons who lived with affectionate wives and had goodly sons and daughters not a few, would hardly lie quiet in their graves if an attempt should be made to trace for them an irregular descent from the more distinguished but not more pious or useful Benedict saints of the olden time, whom rules of celibacy, and vows of monkish seclusion, compelled to solitary sterility.

Ours is the genealogy of a line beginning with the pioneers of Christian civilization, in the settlement of a new continent, and, whatever may be their lineage, their lives, in the infant hamlets of their new home, could not be otherwise than simple and humble. Many of gentle blood and noble birth, came with the early settlers and accepted the equality of wilderness life, but we can make no boast of heraldry. Aside from dim traditions, traceable to no authentic source, that we are of Huguenot origin, there is nothing to mark the family history but the incidents of humble, plebeian life in America.

There is, however, a coat of arms, with an appropriate Benedict motto, supposed to have been made within the last quarter of a century, by a traveling Englishman with some heraldic knowledge and more pretension, and offered for sale by him to individuals of the family, with a statement that the family is of Silesian origin, bearing the titles of Count of the Banat and Baron of the Holy Roman empire, the last German count Von Benedict having passed, first to France, and then to England, in the time of Edward the Sixth. This coat of arms, artistically blazoned with its pairs of ostrich feathers, tied with gold, and its crests of helmets, and coronets, and plumes, is a beautiful picture, but there is no reason to doubt its being an entire sham, intended to impose upon the credulous. We will have none of it except the motto Benedictus qui patitur, which we make our own. The sterling virtues of our forefathers, and their excellent example, are our true hereditary distinction. It cannot be said more truly of us than of the noblest families, that the full and true genealogy of the family must contain many obscure and worthless individuals. Let the nobleman of the highest rank and the longest ancestral line, bring in review before him all his family, direct and collateral, and he would behold a motley crowd in that grand procession. Rags and tatters would be quite as conspicuous as purple and orders, and the tools of labor might be more numerous, as well as more useful, than the sceptres, and batons, and escutcheons of nobility. Henry the Eighth said: "I can make seven lords of seven plowmen, but I cannot make one Holbein of seven lords;" and Burns has only expanded that idea when he says:

"A king can mak' a belted knight,
A marquis, duke, and a' that;
But an honest man 's aboon his might,
Guid faith he maunna fa that!
For a' that, and a' that,
Their dignities, and a' that,
The pith o' sense and pride o' worth,
Are higher ranks than a' that."

It has been said that one who has no family pride, no regard for his ancestors, probably never had a grandfather. This is too strongly expressed, but it is safe to say, that one who has regard for his ancestors, will be more likely so to conduct himself, and so to teach his children, by precept as well as by example, that they may be proud to keep a record of their ancestors. Family pride is wonderfully conservative and elevating in its influence. As blood will tell, so character will tell. National, tribal and family characteristics are but the evidence of transmission of personal qualities, but they are transmitted as well by precept and example as by the hereditary flow of the blood. The fondness for ancestral history, in itself a highly estimable quality, is one of our family traits, as is shown in the history of the growth of this genealogy. Our first American grandmother, who walked in all the ordinances of the Lord, blameless, till she looked over the brow of a hundred years into the happy land, must not be omitted as the author of the first Benedict genealogy, and our first teacher of the moral lesson of family pride. Like an old chronicler, she told the traditionary story of the family in England, and of its first generation here, to her grandson James, afterwards one of the seven deacons of the seven churches, through whom the diaconal succession has come down, in increasing numbers, through the seven generations; sacred number seven. He reduced the tradition to writing, and in due time it passed from him, by a copy, to his grandson Abner, then a student in college, and afterwards the first clergyman in the family, thence to me his grandson. My inquiries showed that many copies of it were extant in the original form.

In 1840, while delivering the anniversary discourse before the alumni of Williams College, I had for a listener Lewis Benedict, an eminent merchant of Albany, who was there to listen to the orations of his two sons — Lewis on taking his degree as master of arts, and Edmund A., his degree as bachelor of arts. He sought an introduction to me for the purpose of inquiring whether I had any knowledge of the family pedigree, which he had hitherto sought in vain. He was furnished with a copy of the old record, with its additions. To it he added his own line, and printed a small edition for gratuitous distribution in the family. From him it came into the hands of his son Henry Marvin. All these parties, before him, had added to the record as they acquired new information, and he, the final family historiographer, has sent out in every direction, and explored all sources of knowledge, and having collected, from willing sources, all the scattered threads into a manifold cord, has bound us all in one bundle of family life. We need no better evidence than his correspondence and this book that honoring our father and our mother is a family characteristic. Our days as individuals and as a race have been long in the land — we are long-lived — perhaps in fulfillment of the divine promise, "to honor thy father and thy mother."

Early sickness took Henry M. from his studies and gave him years of suffering, and made him an invalid for life, as we are told in the too brief notice of him. Benedictus qui patitur. We regret the wearisome days and nights of his illness, but we rejoice that it gave him leisure to become famous in the family as the chronicler and genealogist of the Benedicts in America.

The very ungracious manner in which Col. Nicolls took New Netherlands from the Dutch, rendered it necessary to select reliable men for officers of the English military organization, and the choice of our first American progenitor Thomas, pater omnium Benedictorum, as lieutenant of the foot company of Jamaica, is perhaps evidence that he had that loyal and military instinct which has characterized the family.

When the little train band "exercised" on the plains at Jamaica, we cannot doubt that some of the lieutenant's sons were in the ranks, while his youngest son Daniel, with other boys, looked on with childish delight. Ten years later young Daniel volunteered for the "direful swamp fight."

In the early days the armies and battles were small, but the bravery and the victories and the consequences were great. Hobomak, pointing to Pecksuot, the dead giant savage chief, whom little Captain Standish had killed in a hand to hand fight, said to the captain, "He said yesterday you were but a little man, but to-day I see you are big enough to lay him on the ground." So it was with these few American forefathers, who sought to introduce civilization and Christianity into a savage wilderness. They were big enough for their share of the great enterprize of beginning a nation.

Mr. Robinson, the saintly minister in Holland, when he heard of the deeds of Standish, thought "perhaps the Captain was of too warm a temper and wanting in the tenderness of the life of man, made after God's image, and that it would have been happy if they had converted some before they had killed any." We are compelled to say that young Daniel fell under the same condemnation when, leaving his father and brothers at home to take care of their wives and children, if the Indians should come upon their little hamlet, he took his life in his hand and his firelock on his shoulder, and marched with some of his neighbors to join the little army of one thousand one hundred and twenty-seven, which, after a march of ten days in the deep, untrodden, snow of a wilderness, in the severest cold of a Northern winter, went into that direful swamp fight, almost the bloodiest of all battles. They, too, seem to have been of a warm temper, with little tenderness for either their own lives or those of the savages. This much is clear, that they left to the Lord to save such of those merciless Indian savages as His abundant grace might please, while they addressed themselves, with singleness of heart, to the more human duty of saving their scattered little homes and cradles from the war-whoop, the scalping-knife, and the torch of Indian warfare. Some hundreds of the whites and more thousands of the Indians fell in the dreadful slaughter, which destroyed the proud and powerful Narragansetts.

To-day, two hundred years after that day of small things, we read with pleasure the record of that little community — population two hundred and forty-nine, men, women and children — that they, "out of respect and thankfulnesse to the sayed souldiers doe with one consent and freely give and grant unto so many souldiers as were in the service at the direful swamp fight twelve acors of land." Daniel got his twelve acres Feb. 16, 1677. That land grant in the town was more than one hundred and sixty acres in the far west now. It was visibly there, a memorial for him and his children, and his children's children to the latest posterity.

Those who look through this genealogy will see that the dwellings of our patriotic ancestors were selected by the public enemy for conflagration, and will find its pages thick, from the beginning to the end, with the names of chaplains and officers and soldiers, who for two hundred years have, at the call of their country, left the pursuits of peaceful life to fight the battles of every war, from the swamp fight of King Philip's war to the multitudinous battles of the greatest civil war in history, in every war, bleeding on the bloodiest fields and starving in the most cruel prisons.— Benedictus qui patitur.

It is proper to say something, also, of the "American" character of the family — its flexibility and its ready resources. It started here anew. Three generations of only sons were the last of the race in England, and when Thomas Benedict had sailed for America, the name was unknown in the British islands. As he started on a new career he seems, almost to have taken a new nature, so completely did he take on what has since become the habits of an American settler, advancing to and carrying forward the line of national progress, and practically embracing in his own person the many functions of civil life. Landing in Massachusetts bay, then a settlement seventeen years old, he soon sought the more thinly populated region of Long Island, then comparatively inaccessible from the mainland in the winter; and he was charged with the powers of a magistrate, and substantially with the powers of the government— in the language of the old record, "empowered to act in point of government," "invested with magistratical power on the island." He was a pillar in the church. He was the arbitrator of differences, civilized and savage; the pacifier of the offended Indian chief. He was an officer of the little train band of the neighborhood. He was the member of the legislative body to create and to codify the system of law on the island after the conquest from the Dutch, and afterwards of the colonial legislature. He aided in the organization and sending out of little colonies to plant new neighborhoods, entrusted with these functions by the voice and choice of his neighbors, whose entire confidence he enjoyed. Every person who has mixed in frontier life, will readily recall instances of such men, and testify to their great influence for good. Such was our ancestor; all sorts of offices in church and state clustered around him, forced upon him by the popular choice, and every where he wrought righteousness. His characteristics are not yet extinct.

The religious character of this history is not its least remarkable peculiarity. It is well known that the churches of those days were ecclesiastical democracies. The office of deacon embraced the functions of the elder and deacon in the Presbyterian churches. In the sickness or absence of the pastor, or a vacancy in the pastorate, "a deacon's meeting" was the regular sabbath service of the church, the exercises being conducted by one or more of the deacons, a sermon being read by a deacon or perhaps by a layman on the request of the deacons. The deacons are always chosen by the popular vote of the communicants, male and female. The highest fitness for the office comprized intelligence, practical business capacity, and devout religious feeling, holding the mystery of the faith in a pure conscience, performing the works of faith with the labor of love. To fill such an office 'with good acceptance to God and man till old age and its attendants rendered them unable to serve,' was a duty of usefulness and honor, and especially of holy living.

Those patriarchs of our family who have come down to us in their life and example with the odor of sanctity, let us bear them in our heart's core, our heart of hearts. The original pair were evidently most devout and exemplary persons, and it was fitly said of them by their grandson that they walked in the midst of their house with a perfect heart and in all the commandments and ordinances of the Lord blameless and obtained a good report through faith. Their descendants should not fail to become familiar with the full and admirable biographical sketch with which the genealogy opens. The same character went down to the next generation unimpaired, and the unction with which Capt. James Benedict in 1755 speaks of the first three generations, including his own, shows that the lessons of his grandparents had not fallen on unwilling ears, and that their devout life and holy example had left its impress on all those who came within the sphere of their influence. It is plain that the religious character of this primitive pilgrim pair had struck in and was incorporated into the family nature, and so we find, through all the subsequent ages, members, deacons, and pastors of churches spread through all the family — yet not running in one narrow, bigoted and sectarian line of faith and practice, but with true evangelical fraternity, branching out into the leading denominations of Christians.

It should be said, finally, that no comparison is made of our family with other families. Our ancestors did not live or work alone. Hundreds of similar genealogies might be made, and many, doubtless, of more striking character than this. As aids to national and local as well as individual history, our libraries ought to be filled with such genealogies of all those primitive families, that by their excellent qualities, made possible that Christian civilization, on popular principles, which underlies our national prosperity, and which was the more remarkable, as these people sprang from monarchical stock, and many of them were of noble blood. The interfusion and assimilation of all classes and ranks was complete, which would hardly have been possible, had it not been that the religious faith and sympathies of the earliest settlers, made the theocracy and republican equality of the early Hebrew commonwealth the cement of their association, the laws of Moses their sufficient code of elementary moral law, and liberty, equality and fraternity the necessary result of their common perils, and their one great purpose.

May we not hope that the striking lessons taught by this family record will be impressed upon all of us, so that two hundred and fifty years hence, when eight more generations shall have passed away, the family may still show an unbroken record of the same characteristics.

"Magistratus indicat virum."

AMONG those Englishmen who went into voluntary exile, rather than endure the cruelties and oppressions of Stuarts in the State and Lauds in the Church, was Thomas Benedict, of Nottinghamshire. There is reason to suppose that his own remote ancestor had made England his refuge from religious persecution on the Continent. There was a tradition in his family which ran, that anciently they resided in the silk manufacturing district of France and were of Latin origin; that, Huguenot persecutions arising, they fled to Germany, and, thence, by way of Holland to England. It is said of Thomas Benedict, that he was born in 1617; that he was an only son, that the name had been confined to only sons in the family for more than a hundred years; and that, at the time he left England, he did not know of another living person of the name; whence, it is assumed, that his father was not living.* His mother he had lost early, his father marrying, for his second wife, a widow, whose daughter, Mary

* Hinman says: "Thomas Benedict was the only early settler found in the colony of Connecticut of the name of Benedict." The same is true of all the other colonies.

Bridgum, came to New England in 1638, in the same vessel with Thomas, then in his twenty-first year. Soon after their arrival they were married, and finding the society and institutions of Massachusetts Bay congenial, they resided in that colony for a time. These facts in the history of Thomas Benedict are verified by the testimony of Mary Bridgum herself, who lived to the age of one hundred years, and in her life-time communicated them to her grandson, Deacon James Benedict, of Ridgefield, Conn., who recorded them in 1755.*

* "Be it remembered that one William Benedict, about the beginning of the 15th century,* who lived in Nottinghamshire, in England, had a son born unto him whom he called William, after his own name (an only son); and this William, the 2d of that name, had also an only son whom he called William; and this 3d William had in the year 1617 one only child whom he called Thomas; and this Thomas's mother dying, his father married the widow Bridgum.

Now this Thomas was put out an apprentice to a weaver, who afterwards, in the 21st year of his age, came over into New-England, together with his sister-in-law, Mary Bridgum. Afterwards said Thomas was joined in marriage with Mary Bridgum. After they had lived some time in the Bay parts, they removed to Southhold on Long Island, where were born unto them five sons and four daughters, whose names were Thomas, John, Samuel, James, Daniel, Betty, Mary, Sarah and Rebeccah. From thence they removed to a farm belonging to the town, called Hassamamac, where they lived some time. From thence they removed to Huntingtown, where they lived some years. Then they removed to Jamaica on said Island, where Thomas, their eldest son took to wife Mary Messenger, of that town. And last of all, they removed to Norwalk, in Fairfield county, Connecticut, with all their family, where they were all married. John took to wife Phebe, daughter to Mr. John Gregory, of said Norwalk. Samuel took to wife Rebecca Andrews. James took to wife Sarah Gregory, sister of the above said Phebe. Daniel took to wife Mary Marvin. Their daughters were all married. Betty to John Slawson, of Stanford; Mary to John Olmsted; Sarah to James Beebe; Rebeccah to Samuel Wood. From these have risen a numerous offspring.

The children of Thomas, the 2d of that name, were Thomas (an only son), Mary, Hannah, Esther, Abigail and Elizabeth. The children of John were Sarah, Phebe, John, Jonathan, Benjamin, Joseph, James, Mary and Thomas. The children of Samuel were Joannah, Samuel, Thomas, Rebeccah, Esther, Nathaniel and Abraham. The children of James were Sarah, Rebeccah, Phebe, James, John, Thomas and Elisabeth. The children of Daniel were Mary, Daniel, Mercy and Hannah. The children of Betty were Mary and Thomas. The children of Mary were John, Mary, Jane, Sarah, Rebeccah, Elisabeth, Daniel, Richard, Eunice and Deborah. The children of Rebeccah were an infant (I know not his name), and Samuel. The

The separate colonies, which afterward formed that of Connecticut, had been founded under auspices peculiarly hopeful, and were nourished by influences specially edifying and elevating in the view of the more austere of the Puritans. The foundations and expanding superstructures were according to the plans and specifications of Winthrop, of Haynes, and, especially, of Hooker, "the light of the Western churches." The valley of the Connecticut, too, was famous for its fertility, and the stream was considered a principal natural channel for the lucrative trade in furs with the natives of the interior. It had waged its first Indian war with a vigor and severity which precluded all present dread of another. Thomas Benedict seems to have been so far attracted by the moral or material advantages of this promising children of Sarah were Sarah and James. All of these were the children and grand-children of our honoured predecessors, Thomas Benedict and Mary his wife, who walked in the midst of their house with a perfect heart. They were strict observers of the Lord's day from even to even;* and I think it may be said of them, as it was of Zacharias and Elisabeth, "that they walked in all the commandments and ordinances of the Lord blameless, and obtained a good report through faith." Their excellent example had a good effect, by the blessing of heaven, upon their children. He was made a deacon of the church at Norwalk, and used that office to the good satisfaction of that church to his death, which was in the 73d year of his age; and two of his sons, viz: John and Samuel, used the office until old age and its attendants rendered them unable to serve any longer. And there are, at this day no less than seven of the family and name that use that office, and some of them at least, I hope, to good acceptance with God and man.

The children of John, the 2d of that name, were John, Matthew, Caleb, Nathaniel, Annah and Phebe. The children of Benjamin were Benjamin, Timothy, John, Samuel, Daniel, Amos, Elisabeth, Mary, Rachael and Thankful. The children of Joseph were Joseph, Gideon, Anna, Pitman, Jonathan, Mary, Ezra and John. The children of James were Sarah, Ruth, Peter, Hannah, Phebe, James, Martha and John and Thomas. The children of Thomas were Ebenezer, David, John, Thomas, Betty and Seth. The children of Phebe were Enos, William, Noah, a son and Phebe. The children of Mary were Ezra, Josiah, Phebe, Asa and Isaac. All these were the grand-children of Deacon John Benedict, the 1st of that name, who was my honoured father.

region as to have removed within its rigorous jurisdiction, still, it could scarcely have been the rich meadows of the valley, or the facilities for traffic afforded by its river, that enticed him, for he soon sought the opposite shore of Long Island, already dotted with settlements from the mainland. In the statement of his wife, Mary Bridgum, to her grandson, before referred to, she names Southold as his place of residence and birthplace of their five sons and four daughters. It is certain, that in June, 1657, he was a resident of Huntington, which leaves but little doubt that he was, early, an inhabitant of Southold, which was settled in 1640. In conjunction with three others, in 1649,* he purchased a tract of land belonging to the town of Southold, called Hashamomack, and this interest he conveyed, in 1659, describing himself in the deed as then of the town of Hunting-

Hashamommuck Beach and Plantation.

"Examine Chase's Map of Suffolk County, N. Y., and you may see a Small body of water marked just north west of the northwest point of Shelter Island and almost connecting Peconic Bay and Long Island Sound. The only separation is a level flat of Sand and Shingle, a few rods wide, and perhaps twenty long, partially covered with sedgy vegetation. Across this flat the famous Guilford expedition drew their whale boats when they made their successful descent upon the British post and stores at Sag Harbor. This flat is Hashamommuck Beach. The Small body of water is now generally called Mill Creek, a tide-mill to grind grain having been built upon it many years ago, and one is still in use near the old site. The proprietor of this mill some six or eight years since cut a canal from the Sound to the creek and thus poured the water of the Sound across Hashamommuck Beach into the creek, to give him more water and a higher head for his mill. But the action of the Sound soon closed the Canal with sand, as all intelligent persons predicted. This creek was formerly Thomas Benedict's, and in the oldest records of Southold is familiarly called Thomas's Creek and then for convenience it became Thom's Creek and even Tom's Creek. I have heard it called Tom's Creek – even in my day. The Creek is a few rods more than two miles east of the First Church of Southold. It is just two miles east of the Southold station of the Long Island Rail Road. Hashamommuck is about a square mile directly east of this Creek."

It has been stated positively that Thomas Benedict was resident in Huntington in June, 1657. This is on the authority of affidavits of himself and wife made on the 13th of that month, in the course of probate proceedings in the matter of the estate of his old neighbor, William Salmon of Hashamomuck.† His connection with affairs of a public nature may be inferred from such records of them as still remain. In May, 1658, the Court of Deputies and Magistrates, sitting at New Haven, were solicited to receive the town of Huntington into the jurisdiction of New Haven, the petition therefor being signed: "Will. Smith, Tho: Benedick, W^m^ Leuerich, in y^e^ name and with y^e^ consent of y^e^ rest."‡ That he was put forward as a representa-

The fact that, in this same year, he is recorded as having been chosen town clerk of Norwalk, Ct., gives color to the supposition that some confusion of dates was occasioned about this time by the introduction, into the possessions acquired from the Dutch, of the style in use in England, then, and for many years afterward, and also from the practice of double dating. A flight to the jurisdiction of New England, from that of New York, whose governor must have seemed a lineal representative of the persecutors who had driven the Puritans from the mother country, would not be a surprising thing in the case of any of that people. In that of Thomas Benedict it was a most natural result. Honored, and to some extent trusted, as he had been by both Dutch and English governors of New York, it is beyond controversy that his heart had always been with the government of Connecticut, and that he was the especial enemy of Captain John Scott and his party; for "the killing and quelling" of whom he had, indeed, in 1663, invoked the authority of Connecticut. It is not improbable that after the supremacy of the English had been fully established in the west end of Long Island, Thomas Benedict, and others of like principles, found themselves, socially at least, in a condition not unlike that of the Union men in the south after the Civil War, and could but regard the territory as an excellent one to migrate from. At this time he had a numerous family, one of his sons was married and settled near him; still he took to Norwalk with him all in whose veins his blood ran. Others, who shared his religious and political proclivities, betook themselves to Connecticut, at the same time, and, doubtless, for the same reasons.*

The foregoing is the form of a Military Commission in 1665. Thomas Benedict was appointed Lieutenant and Abraham Smith, Ensigne of Capt. Bryan Newton's Foot Company. Their commissions also bear date 7th Aprill 1665. Book of Deeds, II, pp. 25, 26, office of the Secretary of the State New York.

He must have been a welcome addition to the society of Norwalk, to cause its people to make such haste to elevate him to official station; nor was it a spasmodic appreciation of him merely, for, in the following year, he was not only reappointed to that office, but was, also, made a Selectman of the town. He was continued Town Clerk until 1674; and, after an interval of three years, was again appointed. The records, in his own handwriting, are still preserved, are legible and properly attested by his own signature. His term of service as Selectman covers seventeen years, closing with 1688. His name is one of forty-two who comprised the list of Freemen in 1669. He was the representative of Norwalk in the General Assembly in 1670, and again in 1675. In the Patent, granted by the General Court in 1686, confirming the title of Norwalk to its territory, his name is inserted as a patentee. In May, 1684, the General Court appointed him and three others to plant a town "above Norwalke or Fayrefeild," at Paquiage †; and in the fall of that

Bounded east by Mr Handford's and John Ruscoe's, west by John Bowten, north by Town Highway, south by Richard Homes. Hall, p. 24.

Thomas Benedict, Sen., in 1669, bought of Samuel Campfield his houselot, granted him by the town, between Tho Betts and Ephraim Lockwood. Ibid., p. 27.

For location of Thomas Benedict's home lot see Map of the Old Settlement in Hall's Hist. of Norwalk, Ct. There is now (1870) upon the Lot a neat two story frame building owned by H. Hoyt — It is reached on the rail road almost immediately after crossing the Norwalk bridge going East. The track crosses a corner of the original lot.

† At General Court of Conn., held May, 1684:

Mr. John Bur, Mr. Tho. Fitch, Mr. Tho. Benedict are by this Court appoynted and impowred a Committee for to order the planting of a Towne aboue Norwalke or Fayrefeild and to receiue in inhabitants to plant there; and what they, or any three year and the spring of 1685, Samuel and James, sons of Thomas, and six others, with their families, settled there, the land having been purchased from the Indians. The parties most interested asked that their settlement might be named "Swamfeild"; but, in 1687, the General Court denied their request and called it Danbury.*

Beside the service of these more conspicuous appointments, he rendered much to his friends in a non-official and neighborly way. His good sense and general intelligence, some scientific knowledge and his skill as a penman, made him their recourse when papers were to be drafted, lands to be surveyed and apportioned, or disputes to be arbitrated. It is evident that very general respect for his judgment prevailed, and that trust in his integrity was equally general and implicit.

Little has been said of Thomas Benedict's labors in that other department, which, in view of the character and mental habitudes of the communities, at the time he dwelt among them, were of public importance, and, perhaps, in the popular estimation far transcended in value his civil services, that of ecclesiastical affairs. No extended account of them will be given now, seeing that it is impossible to make them of much interest to the people of this day. The early church records, both of Southold and Huntington, are not now to be found; but the position he held among the citizens of both make it highly probable, that he was concerned in establishing the first church in each. Where the church records of any town in which he lived are preserved, they furnish abundant evidence of his zeal and dili-

Fitch, Jehu Burr, John Burr and Tho. Bennydick. Town and Lands, I, 226.

The General Court substituted the name of Danbury. The petitioners stated that "there are twentie families inhabiting at Paquiage and more desirable persons a comminge." Col. Rec., Vol. III, p. 240.

gence in establishing and maintaining the public worship of God. Whether it was settling or supporting a minister, repairing the church edifice or building a new one, providing seats or allotting them, Thomas Benedict's name is almost certain to appear on the records in connection with it. He is identified with the founding of the first Presbyterian church in America, at Jamaica, in 1662; and during the term of his residence there, he was of the committee to make the rate and provide the means to support its minister.* In Norwalk, he was chosen Deacon, and held the office during his life.

No record can be found that indicates the day of his death; one, of his Will, is extant, which states that he was "weak of body;" "aged aboute 73 years;" and that his Will was executed the "eight and twentieth feb.r. ano dominy 1689–90." An Inventory of his Estate, in which he is described as "late deceased," was taken on the 18th of March in the same year;

* I, Thomas Bennidick of Norwalk, in ye County of Fairfield, in ye Colony of Conecticut, aged aboute 73 years, being weak of body, yet of perfect mind and memory, do make and declare this as my last Will and Testament.

Imprimis. I do commend my Soule into ye hands of my gracious God yt hath made it, and do give my body to ye Earth from whence it was, to be decently buried, in hope of a happy and gracious Resurrection at ye last day; As for my temporall Estate, I do despose of as followeth:

I do will and bequeath my Sonn, John Bennedick, my calve pasture Lot — he [to] pay to my grandchild Thomas Slauson, ye Son of my daughter, Elizabeth Slasson, ye sum of ten pounds — which I give him as a legacy in time convenient.

I do also give to my said Son, John Bennedick one third part of my Sticky plaine Lott, which is half broken up. I also bequeath to him yt part of salt meadow lying be ye bridge at ye Indian Feild. Also, unto him, I bequeath eight acres of upland laid out above ye Long Swamp beyond ye New feild — All these lands to be to him and his heirs forever.

I do will and bequeath to my son, James Benedick, my Long Lot of Salt Medow — over ye River — lying between Keloge and Bets — I do also bequeath to ye said James, my son, half my fruitefull Spring Lot — yt Lyeth sideing by ye medow, provided ye said James shall pay to my Grandchild Elizabeth Slausson, ye sum of five pounds, in time convenient, the afforesaid Land to be James and his heirs forever.

ployment of a public nature. Until his settlement at Norwalk, when he was nearly fifty years old, no one place appears to have held him long; and it is a remarkable thing that these changes of abode, each of which must have made him a new comer, never prevented his immediate preferment either in church or state affairs. It would be only reasonable to infer, that the alacrity with which he was honored and trusted, under the circumstances, was due to his established character for prudence and ability. The action of the General Court, whenever his name came before it, shows that he was known and esteemed by the authorities of the main land; indeed it is apparent from cotemporaneous events that he was a main support of the cause of Connecticut on Long Island. That he was a man of realize them, it proved by his persistence in schemes designed to increase the power and expand the jurisdiction of the commonwealth he loved. The four families found by Carteret, at Elizabethtown, were the pioneers of the Jamaica colony, of which he was one of the projectors. His connection with the founding of Danbury has been stated. Traces of other plans for colonizing are visible yet, but the event of them is not.* They were, of course, less successful than those mentioned; but they serve to show his zeal and enterprise in that direction. The holder of military commissions, in so unquiet a time, it might naturally be expected that some feats of arms would illustrate the annals of his life. Nothing appears to satisfy such an expectation, reasonable as it may be; and, probably, for the reason that no occasion for service of that sort arose, at the times and places, when and where, he held military rank. If, however, the training of his children may be regarded as an indication, it is entirely certain, that he did not fail to educate them to the high duty of fighting for their country. His family participated in the Indian wars of the time, and one was prominent in perhaps the most bloody struggle of all. His son, Daniel, in 1677, received a grant of land, from the town of Norwalk, for his services in "the direful swamp fight" of Dec. 19, 1675.† By this mournful and expressive title, bereaved New England was accustomed to identify the memorable expedition against the Narragansetts, which, however disastrous to the savages, filled the whole country with woe and lamentation. His posterity have never shown themselves derelict in respect either to loyalty or bravery. The public enemy has ever been their enemy; the muster rolls of every army ever raised to defend the country, or to achieve or maintain its independence, abound with their names; and none more so than those of the last and greatest of all American armies; the army, whose loyalty, patriotism, bravery and patience, saved the cause of Liberty and Civilization, first for their countrymen, and scarcely less, for the rest of mankind.

It is to be regretted that few or no details of the social or domestic life, no personal traits, no characteristic incidents, of himself or wife have come down to us. During the term of their migrations, with so numerous family, the household cares and duties must have been especially burdensome and perplexing to the wife and mother. It was within this period, too, that the character and habits of their children were, mainly, formed; for at the time they ceased to wander and sat down in Norwalk, their eldest born was twenty-five years old, and married, and their youngest must have been eight years old at least. The fruits of their culture and discipline, under circumstances certainly not favorable, are conspicuous enough in the character and lives of their children, and childrens' children; and prove him to have been a wise and prudent father, and her a judicious and faithful mother. The love which united them at the beginning kept them united to the end; and his Will, probably one of the last acts of his life, is full of evidences of thoughtful affection for his wife; his great concern seeming to have been to secure her comfort when he should be able to provide for it no longer. Their grandson, Deacon James Benedict, of Ridgefield, is the only one of their posterity, who, speaking from actual knowledge, furnishes even a glimpse of this interesting couple. He says: "they walked in the midst of their house with a perfect heart. They were strict observers of the Lords day 'from even to even'; and I think it may be said of them, as it was of Zacharias and Elizabeth, that 'they walked in all the commandments and ordinances of the Lord blameless, and obtained a good report through faith.' This excellent example had a good effect, by the blessing of heaven, upon their children. He was made a Deacon of the church at Norwalk, and used that office to the good satisfaction of that church to his death, which was in the 73^{d} year of his age; and two of his sons, viz: John and Samuel, used the office until old age and its attendants rendered them unable to serve any longer. And there are at this day [1755] no less than seven of the family and name that use that office, and some of them at least, I hope, to good acceptance with God and man." This proclivity toward deaconship continued in the family; for, as late as 1851, another of his descendants, Rev. Dr. Nathaniel Bouton, in an Historical Discourse pronounced by him, July 9th of that year, on occasion of the two hundredth anniversary of the settlement of Norwalk, closes a tribute to the memory of his ancestor thus: "The savor of his piety, as well as his venerable name, has been transmitted through a long line of deacons and other godly descendants, to the seventh generation."

Hall, in his History of Norwalk (pp. 174-77) gives some of Mr. B.'s reminiscences of the burning of the town by the British. He (Mr. B.) says they came Saturday, while the people were harvesting. Our soldiers collected fast, and stopped to drink wine on the stoop of his father's house. The family packed up their goods hastily, and took refuge that night at Belden's Hill. A party of light horse came in the night, and in the morning they saw the smoke rising from Norwalk. The house where Mr. B. lived (1847) was used as a hospital by the British, was set on fire when the retreat commenced, but the people rallied and saved it from the flames. Mrs. Benedict, who lived at Roton river, saw the fleet coming from Long Island. She remembered that one night her mother courageously gave the alarm when the tories were stealing the cattle. A tory fired at her mother, and Mrs. B. heard the ball whistle. Thomas d. Jan. 5, 1852. Ch.

1. JOHN[2] (Thomas[1]), born at Southold, L. I., removed with the family to Norwalk and married Phœbe, daughter of John and Sarah Gregory* of that town, Nov. 11, 1670.† He was a freeman of Norwalk in 1680, and succeeded his father as selectman in 1689. He was a selectman in 1692–94 and '99; and also held some minor civil appoint-

Beeston, de Overbroughton, com. Nott. (on borders of Leicestershire, north of Frisby and Asorby); John[5] Gregory= Alicia * * * de Broughton Sulney; Henry[6] de Boston in Nova Anglia.

Henry[6] Gregory, of Boston, N. E., whom we find mentioned in the foregoing pedigree, was at Springfield 1639, and removed in a few years to Stratford, Ct. Savage says that he probably died soon after, as a distribution of his estate was ordered 19 June, 1665, his eldest son John being appointed administrator, and to receive double portion, and that no other children are mentioned; though perhaps Judah Gregory of Springfield, who m. 1643, Sarah, dau. of Henry Burt, was another son. John Gregory, of New Haven, and afterwards of Norwalk, Ct., was possibly the administrator above referred to; he had Joseph, bapt. 26 July, 1646; Thomas, 19 March, 1648; his other children and their issue are mentioned by Savage, and by Hall in his history of Norwalk; of his daus. [Phœbe and Sarah], m. into the family of Thomas Benedict, of Southold, L. I., and afterwards of Norwalk, who came out at the age of 22 about 1639, and was said to be the only son of Wm. Benedict of Nottinghamshire. N. E. Hist. and Gen. Reg., vol. XXIII, pp. 304–7.

Thomas Benedict was a witness to will of John Gregory of Norwalk, Ct., made Aug. 15, 1689. He bequeathed his estate to his wife Sarah. John and James Benedict (sons of Thomas) are mentioned as sons-in-law. Sarah also, in an instrument, dated Oct. 9, 1689, so names them. Prob. Rec. (Fairfield), vol. 3.

ments in the town. He was occupied, however, mainly, with church affairs, having become Deacon, probably, upon the death of his father. Thenceforth the records show him to have been constantly on committees having charge of the religious and educational interests of the community, now "obtaining a minister," then, "hyering a schoolmaster." In 1705 the church honored him by voting him a sitting "in y^e^ seat before y^e^ pulpit." He served as representative in the General Assembly in the sessions of 1722 and 1725. The date of his death is not to be ascertained, nor is that of his wife. The volume of probate records, which probably covered the time within which they died, unfortunately, is missing. He conveyed property to his sons James and Joseph of Ridgefield, in 1722 and 1723; and that he was living in 1727, is thought to be certain, because his son is then referred to as Deacon John Benedict Junior. 5. JAMES[3] (John,[2] Thomas[1]), b. Jan. 5, 1685; m. 1709, Sarah, dau. Thomas and Mary Hyatt of Norwalk, b. Dec., 1686, and d. Feb. 9, 1767. "In 1708 he and other inhabitants of Norwalk purchased a large tract of land between that town and Danbury. The purchase was made of Catoonah the chief sachem, and other Indians, who were the proprietors of that part of the country. Deed bears date Sept. 30, 1708. At the Norwalk town session, 1709, it was ordained that it should be a distinct township by the name of Ridgefield." (Trumbull, p. 460). James was also one of the original settlers of this township. Fence-viewer in 1715, called Ensign, 1719, afterwards Captain, and, 1737, Esquire. He was appointed justice of the peace for Fairfield county, Ct., May, 1732, and was reappointed annually until 1733. He was representative for Ridgefield, from May, 1740–45, and 1748–1752. He was the first to write the genealogy of the Benedict family. In his youth he lived with his grandmother, Mary Bridgum, wife of Thomas, and she delivered to him, from her own mouth, the genealogy down to his own memory, and he reduced it to writing. His Genealogy of the Family of the Benedicts, dated March 14, 1755, has been the foundation of all the subsequent ones. His grandson, Abner Benedict, a member of the junior class in Yale College, made an exact copy of it, June 23, 1768. James was the second Deacon of the church in Ridgefield, till old age and its attendants rendered him unable to serve. He sustained the character of a pious and exemplary Christian. His death occurred Nov. 25, 1762. The following inscription is on his gravestone in Ridgefield.

6. Capt. THOMAS[3] (John,[2] Thomas[1]), b. 1682, Norwalk, Ct.; m. 1705, Millison, dau. Thomas and Mary Hyatt of that town. Thomas Hyatt was active and brave enough in the Indian wars of his time to incite the town to make to him a grant of land as a testimonial of its gratitude, and a requital of his services. Millison, b. Dec., 1686, was twin-sister of Sarah, who became the wife of Dea. James[3] (5) Benedict of Ridgefield. Thomas appears to have possessed a strong desire for military distinction, together with so much aptitude for affairs of that character, that during his whole life, he was never without some military rank. He comes before us as "Sergeant," in 1713; as "Ensign," in 1724; as "Lieutenant," in 1742, and as "Captain," in 1746; this latter title adhering to him for the rest of his life. It is very evident, however, that civil position was not distasteful to him; for he was chosen selectman not less than seven times, and moderator of the annual town meetings at least ten times; the last occasion being the year preceding his death. He was representative in the General Assembly, probably in 1737 and 1740, and certainly in 1744. He exhibited the family tendency to do service in the church. Dec. 2, 1724, the town desires him "to sett y^e^ tune to y^e^ Psalme, at such times as that part of service is to be performed in y^e^ publik worship of God; and to read y^e^ Psalmes needed; y^e^ town, also Seat y^e^ said Bennedick in y^e^ 3^d^ long seat at y^e^ end of y^e^ middle alley." The power of his voice must have been something remarkable, for it is stated on credible authority that he could be heard and understood at the distance of more than a mile. It is probable he was a Deacon of the church (Congregational) of which he and his wife were members (1725), but the loss of the church records prevents certain knowledge on this point. His will bears date May 20, 1763, and was proved July 5, 1763.* He died, of course,

Assembly, Oct., 1762 His house and barn were burned by the British in 1779. The following obituary notice of him was written by Hon. Roger Minot Sherman: "He died at Norwalk on the morning of the 2d of April, 1806, after a shock of the palsy, with which he lingered about twelve days, in the 90th year of his age. On the 3d his remains were followed to the grave by a large concourse of friends and relatives, among whom were his twelve(?) surviving children, and many of his more remote posterity. He has left ninety-one grandchildren and eighty-eight great-grandchildren, the whole number of his descendants, now living, being 191. For about thirty-two years he sustained the office of Deacon of the First Congregational church in that town. Deacon Benedict was one of those venerable personages by whom what remains of the pious habits of our forefathers, have been transmitted to the present generation. His long life has been eminently exemplary, and years to come will feel its happy influence. Every morning and evening witnessed his devotion. His sabbaths were faithfully appropriated to public worship and religious family instructions. An amiable, cheerful disposition, a sound mind, improved by a good degree of reading, and much reflection, and adorned with a bright constellation of Christian graces, comprised his character. At his funeral an appropriate sermon was delivered by Rev. Dr. Burnett, from Prov. xiv, 32. "The wicked is driven away in his wickedness; but the righteous hath hope in his death." Ch.

* Nancy, b. 1756. It is said of her that "she was superior in education to those around her, and that she was constantly teaching her neighbors to read and write." In 1776, when Gen. Howe advanced northward from New York, she mounted her horse, and with other heroic women, followed the army and witnessed the battle of White Plains." Joseph[4] lived near the "neutral ground," and had in his employ one David Williams, who, when not engaged in military service (the whigs who encountered the "Cowboys" in their excursions into the country were generally in the militia service on short enlistments), made the house of his employer his welcome home. Thus it happened that Williams was enjoying an agreeable tête-à-tête with Nancy Benedict, in the fall of 1780, when she pointed out to him a small company of armed men approaching their village. They entered an inn near by, and Williams, having recognized Isaac Van Wart, John Paulding and others, they set out together for Tarrytown; the especial object of Williams being to reclaim the property of a neighbor, the widow Pelham, or avenge the death of her husband, killed the night before by a party of Cow-boys. At Tarrytown, Williams, Paulding and his cousin Van Wart separated from their companions, taking the east road, at an angle of which they concealed themselves, obtaining a north and west view of it for some distance. The approach of Major Andrè, his arrest, etc., followed. Congress having granted Williams, Nov. 3, 1780, a medal, a yearly annuity of $200, in specie, or an equivalent in current money, during life ; also, the privilege of locating any confiscated lands in the county of Westchester, to the value of $1,250, or of receiving the said sum in cash, he married Nancy Benedict, and with the $1,250 bought a part of the farm owned by his father-in-law and settled upon it, erecting a log cabin to to live in." * * * "In the fall of 1830, he visited the city of New York on the invitation of the corporation, to be present as a guest at the celebration of the French Revolution. Here he received all manner of attentions, and was presented with a silver cup, a silver-headed cane, an elegant horse, carriage and harness. He died at Broome, Schoharie Co., Aug. 2, 1831. After her husband had been dead ten years, Mrs. Williams obtained a continuance of his pension, which had been stopped at his death, receiving $2,000 at once." She d. about 1848, in her 92d year. JOANNA, m. Ward.

ABEL, b. 1750 ; made purchase of a farm 1774–75, on the intervales below the falls, in town of Colchester, Vt., then included in the "New Hampshire grants." With Ethan Allen and the mass of the settlers on these grants — a brave and hearty race of men — he resisted the claims of New York ; and, a decree of a convention of the inhabitants of the counties of Bennington and Rutland, viz : "that no person should take grants, or confirmation of grants, under the government of New York, etc.," having been violated by one Benjamin Hough, he was selected with John Sawyer to carry out in part the sentence of the Committee of Safety, passed after trial upon said Hough. The judgment was "that the prisoner be taken from the bar of this Com. of Safety and tied to a tree, and there on his naked back to receive two hundred stripes; his back being dressed, he should depart out of the district, and on return to suffer death, unless by special leave of the convention. Hough was tied by Ethan Allen to an apple tree and whipped, the act being witnessed by many of the inhabitants." The instrument of punishment was termed the "beach seal," in allusion to the great seal of New Hampshire affixed to the grants made by the governor of that province, of which the beach rod well laid on the naked backs of the "Yorkers" and their adherents, was humorously considered a confirmation. Enjoying as we do the protection of just and equal laws, it is difficult to form a proper estimate of such measures. There was no choice left to the N. H. grantees between an entire surrender of their farms rescued from the the wilderness of nature, and made valuable by their industry, and a determined and persevering resistance by force. Up to Jan. 26, 1775, when Hough was whipped, no division of sentiment with regard to matters of public policy had taken place; and it is significant that Arlington was not represented in any of the conventions of the different towns of Vermont that met to confer upon the Declaration of Independence and other subjects. Her leading men were not prepared for measures so decisive; they had suffered much from New York, but it would have been difficult for them to specify wherein the king had harmed them. The king had given them their farms for a nominal price, had provided reasonably for their religious and secular instruction; in the words of one of them who suffered the loss of all things for his loyalty, "they did not think it right to rebel against a king who had done them no harm." Possibly this feeling and the obligation resting upon churchmen to aid the head of the church — so well known to have influenced great numbers at this trying period, led Abel Benedict to join the Royalist army. He was killed at the battle of Bennington, Aug. 16, 1777.

Aug. 20, 1779, there was a meeting of church members residing in Upper Salem, Cortland's Manor, and other places adjacent, to consult as to the expediency of organizing a church. Peter Benedict was chosen moderator of the meeting. Peter Ferris, the husband of his dau. Hannah, was also present. On the 25th of the same month a church was organized, and Mr. Benedict was chosen Deacon. His two sons, Joel and Abner, were the first pastors of that little flock. His sons were all men of education. Abner grad. Yale college, and Joel, Nassau Hall. Peter entered Yale, but did not graduate, leaving to join the army, the family all being ardent whigs. He d. in 1787, aged 73. His wife d. in 1802, aged 88. A short time before his death he wrote a brief paper of exhortation to all his children of a most affectionate and devotional character, closing with his prayerful blessing, which is evidence of his real character and of the light that shone on his declining years : " Oh ! Thou most blessed Being, Thou sovereign Disposer of Thine own mercies and blessings, I beseech Thee to bless these instructions, and bless my offspring to the latest posterity. And bless this society, and most gracious Sovereign bless this church, this little flock. Build it up in faith, love and kindness. And, oh ! Thou Great Head of the Uni-

May 8, 1740, Mary Blackman of Green Farms, Ct.; m. 2d, Jemima ——; became a member of the Baptist church, Stamford, Ct., and was licensed by that church to preach the Gospel. Having received a call to become pastor of the church at the new settlement of Warwick, Orange Co., N. Y., he removed to that place, and was ordained Nov. 17, 1766. Some time during the troubles of the war of the Revolution, he removed to Wyoming, Pa., and was, with his family, among the sufferers from the fearful massacre of the inhabitants of that place by the tories and Indians under the notorious Brandt. His influence and character as a preacher with the Indians, protected himself and family from personal injury at their hands, but his property was mostly lost or destroyed. After suffering great hardships he returned to the town of Warwick in the year 1777, where he resided until his death, Sept. 9, 1792. His wife died some time previously, and he had m. 3d, wid. Bross, who survived him, but of this third marriage there was no issue. His remains, and those of his first wife, rest in the old Baptist burying-ground near the village of Warwick, but no monument marks their graves. Their descendants form a numerous and highly respected portion of the citizens of Orange county. The memory of the "old Elder," as he is familiarly spoken of, is held in great esteem and veneration by the community at large, as well as by the church of which he was pastor. The following is an extract from its records: "Those who knew him, and yet survive, hold his memory in great respect, and say that it is blessed." Ch. b. Ridgefield, Ct.

He was justice of the peace, 1777–1804; member of the legislature in 1755, '56, '59, '64, '77, and 79; was fifth Deacon of the church in Ridgefield, and officiated many years. We learn "that his mother meant him for the gown, but he chose another dress." Mr. S. G. Goodrich, in his Recollections (p. 223), thus presents the portrait of Deacon John Benedict: "He was a worthy old man, and enjoyed many claims to respect. He was not only a Deacon, but a justice of the peace, and respected the law, especially as it was administered in his own person. He was severe upon those who violated the statutes of the state, but one who violated the statutes of Deacon John Benedict, committed the unpardonable sin. He was the entire police of the meeting-house on Sunday, and not a boy or girl, or even a bumble bee, could offend, without condign punishment." He d. July 9, 1814. Ch. b. Ridgefield:

Living near what was then called the 'lines,' or 'neutral ground' between the British army in N. He belonged to a company of organized militia, called 'minute-men,' who were obliged to be in readiness to march at a moment's notice, and in this capacity did much service. He was a member of the guard over Major Andrè, during a portion of the time of his confinement, trial and execution." "Soon after his marriage he removed to New Canaan and settled upon a farm which he cultivated with his own hands for sixty years. For some time he was a soldier in the Revolutionary War (pensioner); held several public offices in the community; for fifty-nine years a member of the Cong. church, and an efficient Deacon in the same for thirty-six years. He possessed great meekness and gentleness of disposition. His deep interest in the welfare of his country, and in all that appertained to the prosperity of the cause of the Redeemer, led him to make willing contributions, both of his money and services, to the cause of Christian benevolence. The poor found in him a steadfast friend, and to the church he was both an ornament and pillar. Both his corporeal and mental powers remained unimpaired till almost the close of his honorable and useful life, and his end was peace. He d. He was a carpenter, and erected many of the best houses in the village of Clinton. In 1812 he removed to Lennox, and opened a public house in that part of the town known as Quality Hill. At the close of the war he returned to Clinton, and was employed for two years as college steward, keeping 'commons' in the building now used for the mineralogical cabinet. He made a profession of religion in 1820, and was chosen Deacon in 1844 (Cong. church). He was active and efficient in all matters which concerned the welfare of the church and the community. He was a diligent teacher in the sabbath-school, and liberal in his gifts to objects of philanthropy and benevolence. He was not a man of many words, but his testimony was never wanting on the side of virtue and religion. Deacon Benedict continued his habits of activity up to old age. He d. Aug. 7, 1868, aged 92 years, 6 months and 3 days. Mrs. Benedict, his 2d wife, was a valued and faithful member of the church. With a discreet and reliable judgment, and firmness and energy of purpose, she blended a conciliatory deportment, prudence, and practical wisdom. Of great equanimity and uniformity of temper and disposition, she was eminently fitted to be useful. These qualities were sanctified and consecrated by divine grace. She died in the exercise of an humble faith, after a long and tedious illness."

"Mrs. D. was a woman of much native energy, blended with great mildness and gentleness of character. Her piety was of a cheerful cast, lightening every burden of life, sustaining the heart under trial, sanctifying affliction and rendering the future ever bright and joyous through the power of divine faith and love. * * * It was in the private circle of home that her virtues shone most brightly. With a strong faith in the promises of God to parental faithfulness, she labored diligently and prayerfully to inspire her children with honorable and right impulses, and to train them up for usefulness and for heaven. * * * After weeks of painful suffering, which she bore with Christian resignation, she sank to rest, Oct. 9, 1839." lamy of Bethlehem, Ct., and was licensed as a Congregational clergyman. He preached as a candidate for settlement on Long Island, and in Connecticut. In 1771 he was ordained and settled in Middlefield, a parish in Middletown, Ct., and remained there about fourteen years; and, during that time, by his address and efforts, he procured the emancipation of all the slaves held by his people. During the war of the revolution, he was a genuine and consistent whig. He left his people temporarily to act as a chaplain in the army. He was one of the last in the retreat from Long Island, and was in the battles of White Plains and Harlaem. In 1785 he obtained a dismission from Middlefield, Ct., and was next settled at New Lebanon, where he was installed June 8, 1786. He was, at his own request, dismissed in 1791, his salary being greatly in arrears, the balance £642 13*s.* not having been paid until May 19, 1794, as appears by a receipt on the books of the trustees. From New Lebanon he removed to North Salem, thence to Poundridge, and thence to North Stamford, Ct., where his wife died. From North Stamford he removed to Parsippany, N. J., thence to Roxbury, where he died Nov. 19, 1818, aged 78. His fourth wife (wid. Sawyer of Cobleskill) survived him. In the history of Middlesex Co., Ct., he is described as a man of strong and benevolent affections, and an intelligent and able divine. He left behind him some manuscripts, the result of great labor, particularly the one on the Book of Revelations. An ingenious essay on Melchisedec, left by him in manuscript, was published in one of the earliest numbers of the Christian Spectator. He also left some philosophical and mechanical tracts on the tides and winds, and on submarine navigation and attack, exhibiting a profound, ingenious and careful intellect. He was a man of remarkably clear, well balanced and philosophical mind, and of thorough education. He was offered a professorship in Yale College, but did not accept it. The following is the inscription on his gravestone:

Sacred to The memory of
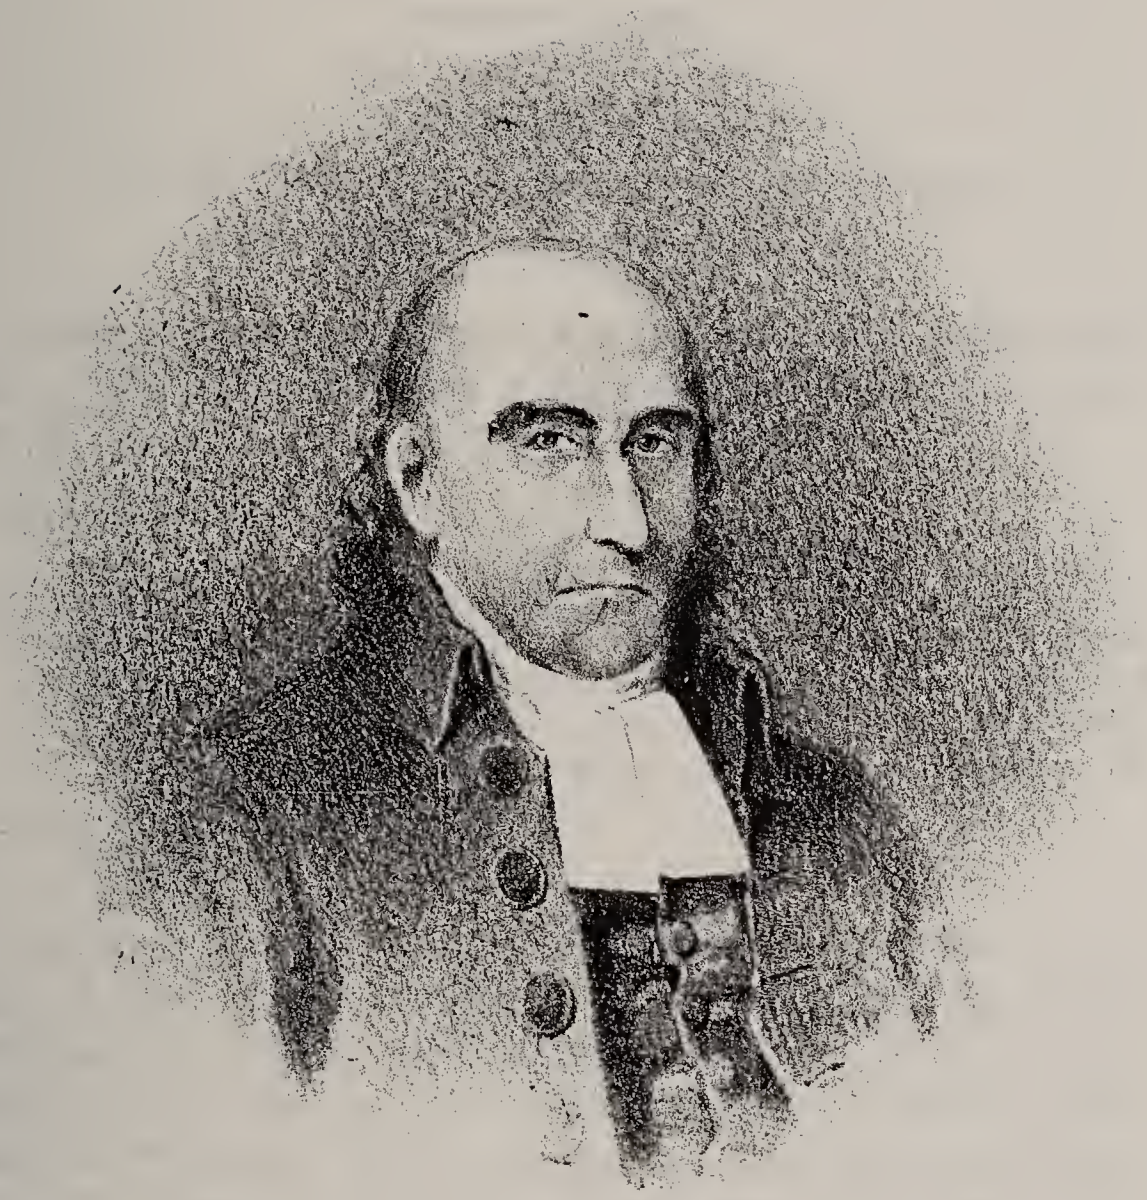
The Rev. Abner Benedict.



Abner Benedict

Distinguished for strength of intellect, serenity of temper and Benevolence of disposition.
His powers and attainments, Great and various,
were ever devoted
To the Service of God
And the good of man.
He died Nov. 19, 1818, aged 77 years and 362 days.
Erected by his son, Joel T. Benedict."

S.), Boston, Mass., and d. June 20, 1831, at Newburgh. "He was graduated at Princeton, 1765, and pursued theological studies with Rev. Dr. Bellamy. He was ordained pastor of Newent Soc., Lisbon, Ct., Feb. 21, 1771, and dismissed for lack of support, May 1, 1782. He then removed to the vicinity of his native place, and preached as he had opportunity, till, in Aug., 1784, he was invited to a pulpit in Plainfield, which had then been nearly seven years vacant. Here he was installed Dec. 23, 1784 — the sermon from his brother, Rev. Abner, of Middlefield parish. The ministerial rate having been given up, his support was provided for by funds and subscriptions. It was eked out by labors as an instructor in academical and theological studies. There Mr. Benedict served a long and happy term of ministerial service, winning to himself much esteem, not only among his own people, but throughout the country. In 1808 he received a Doctorate in Divinity from Union College, and, in 1814, the same degree from Dartmouth College. He was highly reputed for piety, knowledge, and prudence, and was especially thought a proficient in his acquaintance with the Hebrew Scriptures. His manner of preaching is described as quiet and moderate, chiefly extemporaneous, and full of good instruction, but not fitted especially to arouse the careless. He died Feb. 13, 1816. A monument reared by filial affection among the graves of his attached people, commemorates his virtues. A funeral sermon from the text, "A great man has fallen in Israel," by Rev. Samuel Nott, D. D., was published. Dr. Benedict is not known to have published anything except a sermon preached at Dr. Levi Hart's funeral." Cong. Quar., July, 1860. *123. Rev. Amzi[6] (Isaac,[5] Nathaniel,[4] John,[3] John,[2] Thomas[1]), b. May 19, 1791; m. Oct. 5, 1824, Martha S., dau. Gen. Solomon Cowles of Farmington, Ct. "He graduated at Yale College in 1814, and studied theology at Andover, Mass.; was ordained Sept. 24, 1818, in Newbury, with two others, as missionaries to destitute parts of the country; sermon by Dr. Dana. He was ordained pastor at Vernon, June 30, 1834, and dismissed Feb. 10, 1830; was then installed at Pomfret, Oct. 19, 1831; and dismissed July 15, 1834. During this time a revival added seventy-seven to the church, of whom fifty were admitted in one day. He was settled at Manlius, Dec. 6, 1837, and for four years thereafter. For a time he was principal of a female seminary in New Haven; about 1845–6 he supplied the pulpit of Dr. Bond of Norwich for two years; he resided, 1854, in Chelsea, Mass.; in the spring of 1855 took charge of a small society in Yorktown, Westchester Co., where he labored with satisfaction until disabled by a railroad accident, which caused his death three weeks later. He died in Brooklyn, L. I., at the house of his son-in-law, Dr. J. C. Hutchinson, Nov. 17, 1856. 'His sufferings were very great, but he experienced in full the supporting comforts of the religion he had so long professed and preached, and which he had adorned by an exemplary and devoted life. After its return, served as 1st Lt. and A. D. C. on the staff of Brig.-Gen. N. J. Jackson; while holding this position, in the summer of 1863, his regiment (the 145th N. Y. Vols.) was consolidated. Soon after he received a commission in the 46th N. Y. Vols. (a German regt.), stationed at Knoxville, Tenn. He served in it until 1864, when it was mustered out. In Sept., Gen. Jackson joined Gen. Sherman's command, and he reached Atlanta, Ga., early in Oct. Lieut. B. went through the remainder of the march to the sea. Entering the army from patriotic motives, declaring 'that the country needed the hearts of her daughters and the hands of her sons,' he carried with him the virtues and graces of a Christian gentleman, illustrating, during weary marches, and after sharp conflicts, by patient watching in the hospital, by succor cheerfully rendered to escaped Andersonville victims, by courtesy to all men, the Gospel he professed. During his passage through the swamps of South Carolina, he was attacked by severe chills, followed by a persistent cough. These symptoms never yielded to treatment, although they were mitigated by a change, in the winter of 1865, to Austin, Nevada, where Lieut. B. had been appointed agent of the Keystone Mining Co. In the spring he attempted a return home, but suddenly "fell asleep in Jesus," at New Pass station, June 3, 1866. Ch.

Charles Gould, b. July 25, 1838, Manlius. "He received a good English education near Boston, Mass. Removed to Brooklyn in 1853, and in 1854 joined the Clinton Ave. Congregational church. In 1862, though in feeble health, he joined the 13th Regt. N. Y. S. M.; was stationed at Suffolk, Va. At the expiration of his term came home in ruined health, and died March 5, 1863. He was graceful, affable, and engaging, fond of society, and well fitted to adorn it. He had deep convictions and warm sympathies; was a pronounced abolitionist, and it was such feelings that prompted him to join the army, though few were physically more unsuited to hardship and exposure. A decided and active Christian, he avowed his religious convictions in public, and obeyed them in his inner life."

"His early years were spent at Norwalk. After preparatory study at Phillips Academy, Andover, Mass., he entered Yale College, and pursuing the usual course, graduated in 1822. The year following he taught school in Virginia. Although for some years in feeble health, he determined to devote himself to the ministry, and pursued a theological course under private instruction. He commenced the work of the ministry at Waterbury, Ct., in 1826. The following year he preached in Galway, where he received a cordial request from the Congregational church in Norwalk, Ct., to become their pastor. Accepting the invitation, he was installed Aug. 12, 1828, and continued there four years, amid scenes of great religious interest and fruitfulness. Impaired health compelled him to resign his charge and visit the south. On his return, he labored a short time in the church at Somers, in 1833. In October of that year he accepted a call from Lansingburgh, where he remained two years. After which, declining permanent engagements, he preached (1836–7) at Covington, Ky., where he founded a church; afterwards (1838) at Stillwater, then at the Broadway Tabernacle, N. Y.; also, at the Bowery church (1839). Leaving New York, he accepted a call from the Congregational church, Westport, Ct. (1840), and remained there twelve years. Resigning this charge, he spent about a year in Europe (1852), and on his return was settled over the Presbyterian church at Portchester, where he continued until 1863, when advancing years induced him to lay aside his duties as pastor. He continued to reside at Portchester, ministering occasionally there, and in neighboring churches, until his decease, which occurred at Saratoga Springs, July 18, 1868. The foregoing is a brief record of a useful life, held in grateful remembrance in many households where the fragrance of his loving words and deeds still lingers." A funeral discourse was preached in the Presbyterian church, Norwalk, Ct., by B. F. Munday, the pastor, from I John, iii, 2. (See Norwalk Gazette, July 28, 1868, for account of his last illness and funeral services). Ch.

150. Rev. Joel Tyler,[6] A. M. (Rev. Abner,[5] Peter,[4] James,[3] John,[2] Thomas[1]), b. Sept. 6, 1772, at Middletown, Ct.; m. Jan. 1, 1795, Currance, dau. Deacon Adin Wheeler of Southbury, Ct., b. July 6, 1772. "He studied law with Thaddeus Benedict, Esq., of Reading, Ct., and was admitted to the bar of Fairfield Co., in 1794. He continued in the practice of law six years, first in Stamford, and then in Branford; and during this period, 1796–1801, was Chaplain 25th Regt., 5th Brig., 3d

Div of the Ct. Militia. His views changing, after preparatory theological studies with his father, he entered the ministry as a Presbyterian clergyman. He preached his first sermon Jan. 15, 1802. His first congregation was that of Blooming Grove, Orange Co., where he was ordained as an Evangelist, Nov. 16, 1803. From that place he was called to an adjoining agricultural parish (Bethlehem), in the township of New Windsor, where he remained four years. He was next settled over the church and congregation in Franklin, Del. Co., where he remained about eight years, when he was called to New Concord (Chatham), Columbia Co., and was pastor of the Presbyterian church there till, having been repeatedly attacked with bleeding at the lungs, he was forced to abandon the continued active duties of his profession, and was employed by the Pennsylvania branch of the American Tract Society in Philadelphia, where he remained till his death, occasioned by the bursting of a blood-vessel, October 21, 1833. He was buried in Laurel Hill cemetery, Philadelphia, Pa. Eager, in his History of Orange Co., says of him: 'Mr. Benedict was a man of ardent piety, untiring zeal and eloquence, which continually drew crowds to listen to his preaching.' He sometimes left his people and preached as a missionary in the counties of Broome and Chenango, and the neighboring ones of Pennsylvania. The same result followed his preaching in those sparse settlements as elsewhere. The inhabitants flocked to hear him, and were deeply affected. He was almost constantly in the midst of religious revivals from the time he entered the ministry till his health failed. He was active and influential in the Northern Associate presbytery, where he was intimate with Rev. David Porter of Catskill, Rev. Seth Williston of New Durham, Rev. David Harrowar of Sydney, who in the beginning of this century, were the great apostles of the region lying west of the Hudson, and about the head waters of the Delaware and the Susquehanna. There was nothing ornate or rhetorical in his language or manner. He was simple, earnest, clear, and persuasive. His sincerity, sympathy and feeling were irresistible. It was said of his preaching 'the word melted hearts like wax before the fire.' His few published sermons fail to exhibit his power over an audience, because they lack the expression of feature, voice and manner. In all the ministrations of his sacred profession, his manner was very solemn and impressive. In social life, and in his family, he was cheerful and humorous, and abounded in anecdote and repartee. The following extract from a newspaper notice of his widow suggests the influence she may have exerted upon her husband and children. 'She was eminent during her long life for her earnest and practical Christian spirit, the brightness and activity of her intellect, and the vivacity and attractiveness of her disposition. In labors of love for the poor, the sick, and the ignorant, she abounded. To the old, the middle-aged, and the young, her society was alike, ever delightful. Her children and all who knew her rose up to call her blessed. The vigor of her mind was not weakened, the warmth of her love was not chilled, nor the benevolence of her hand checked by her advanced years; and to a remarkable extent her bodily strength remained till her last sickness, which was of but few days' continuance.'" She died June 4, 1862, in the 90th year of her age, at Huntington, Pa. Ch.

Jan. 12, 1831. "He received his classical and mathematical education chiefly under the guidance and instruction of his father. Removing, about 1800, to Parsippany, N. J., with his father, he taught, for a few years, academies, successively in Hanover, Springfield and Newark. In 1807 he removed to Franklin, Delaware county, where he studied theology under his father, whom he had accompanied, and under his elder brother, Rev. Joel T., who was then pastor of the Congregational church at that place. After receiving his license, and preaching a year in Cicero, he removed to Sherburne, where he remained three or four years as pastor of the Congregational church. The remainder of his days he devoted with great zeal and eminent success to the arduous and self-denying labors of an Evangelist. His preaching was singularly practical and searching. His doctrinal sentiments were those of St. Paul, as interpreted by Calvin. Revivals of religion almost invariably attended him whereever he went, and he did much to build up and strengthen, in their infancy, the early churches of Western New York. He was ardent in his feelings, genial in his social intercoure, tender and indulgent in all his family relations, as a lover of man and a lover of God. He died Dec. 25, 1830. Dr. Penney, his friend, and one of the ministers of Rochester, and subsequently president of Hamilton College, preached his funeral discourse from the text 'Our fathers! where are they? and the prophets? do they live forever?' The Rev. Dr. Joel Parker of New York, under date of March 12, 1870, described his friend and colaborer, Rev. Abner, 'as a little less than of a medium stature, of a compact frame, quick in his motions, as indicating a degree of nervous sensibility. His mental characteristics were peculiar, while his modes of thought were chaste, as indicating mental culture, he was distinguished for accuracy of statement and sharpness of discrimination. He was peculiarly a doctrinal preacher, and a high Calvinist. He was a very bold preacher, and an able debater. He was, at times, too, very pathetic, especially at the communion service. His discourses were not considered as eloquent throughout; but they were always replete with sound thought, often marked by passages of great power, delivered in a manner which I was always inclined to characterize as intense. With him true piety was first, and learning next. These were all — godliness and mental discipline.'" Ch.

The Annals of that county mention him as an early settler, and notice the fact that "Esquire Benedict was said to have been very much of the gentleman both in his manners and style of living." He lived for a few years after his marriage in Madison Co., but his home may be said to have been Richfield Springs, where he spent more than thirty years in the occupation of a farmer. Afterwards (1819) he moved into the township of Riga, Monroe Co., bought a small farm partially cleared, and commenced farming, preaching on Sundays over a circuit of some twenty-five miles with much success. He was a logical reasoner and a ready extemporaneous speaker. In his theology he was a Calvinist of the strictest sort, and preached what he believed to be the truth in the face of all opposition. He removed in 1832 to Michigan, under the appointment of the Baptist Home Mission Society, where he labored as a missionary, making long journeys on horseback, and undergoing many hardships and privations in visiting the new settlements, gathering churches and preaching to the destitute. About 1845, his health failing, he ceased his active labors, preaching only occasionally, and writing for the press. He d. March 18, 1851, at Oakland, Mich. His funeral sermon was preached by Rev. Nov. 29, 1763, in Connecticut, and d. Feb. 18, 1801, at Milton. He m. 2d, Feb., 1802, Phœbe, dau. of Benjamin and Phœbe (Rowland) Marvin,† b. May 18, 1779, at Lyme, Ct., and d. Sept. 27, 1825, at Albany. The father of Uriah, and his fellow settlers of Connecticut birth, had left their quiet homes and plunged into the wilderness north of Albany. While they were necessarily exposed to all the privations and perils incident to a frontier life in Revolutionary times, the peculiar situation of their settlement was fraught with additional dangers. It was on a natural route to Canada, which inevitably would become a thoroughfare for hostile expeditions from that quarter. This section was, previous to the war, the abiding place of many malignant and enterprising tories, and the fears of loyal men, that these renegades would become the guides of marauding Indians, were more than realized. In 1779, in consequence of an official warning, all loyalists abandoned their homes and repaired to Schenectady. Uriah Benedict's family was among the refugees. An attack was made by Major Monroe and his savages. The inhabitants rallied and pursued the marauders,

* Joseph[5] Rockwell was b. Feb. 14, 1739; m. Sarah Mead, b. Dec. 15, 1741. His will was proved Saratoga county, June 14, 1823. He was, I think, a son of Joseph[4] of Norwalk, Ct., b. 1708, and d. 1748, leaving: I. Joseph[5]; II. Lydia; III. Phœbe. His father, Joseph,[3] is mentioned among voters of Norwalk (Hall, p. 87), in 1694. He d. 1715-16, leaving: I. Joseph,[4] b. 1708; II. Jonah, b. 1709; III. Simeon, b. 1711; IV. Noah, b. 1712; V. Hannah, b. 1714. This last, Joseph,[3] was probably son of John[2] of Windsor (son of William,[1] born in England), who removed to Stamford and had Joseph and Hannah. Deacon William[1] Rockwell was a member of a church formed in the New Hospital of Plymouth, England, with the Rev. Mr. Wareham as pastor, and Mr. Maverick as teacher, who emigrated to this country in 1630. They landed at Nantucket, and settled in Dorchester, Mass., where they remained till 1636, when the greater portion of them removed to Windsor, Ct., with Rev. Mr. Wareham as their pastor. † Benjamin Marvin was a son of Benjamin (and Deborah Mather), son of John, son of Lieut. Reinold, son of Reinold, a brother of Matthew of Hartford, and, afterwards, of Norwalk, Ct. "Lyme's Captain, Deacon Reinold Marvin," was second son of Lieut. Reinold. Deborah Mather was a descendant of Rev. Richard Mather, the father of Increase Mather, President of Harvard College, who was the father of Cotton Mather. (Marvin Gen., p. 34.)

until met by a captive who had been released, and was charged with a message from Col. Gordon, one of their prisoners, asking that they might not be pursued, because Major Monroe had ordered his men, if attacked, to kill all the prisoners. It is said, that on its becoming known in Montreal that Monroe had given so brutal an order, he was cashiered. Uriah Jr., then in his fourteenth year, probably, was engaged in this pursuit, for his name appears on the pay-roll of that period. He saw service again, in the fall of 1781. He went on foot through the woods to Waterford, a distance of some fourteen miles, and enlisted among the three months men, for the defense of the frontier, then menaced by St. Leger's expedition. Soon after, his father heard that he was seen pursued by an Indian, and was probably killed. After a troublesome journey of seventy miles which Uriah Sr. had made to bring home the body of his son, he found him celebrating some great success of the American arms, probably the surrender of Cornwallis. It seems the son had gained a tree, and consequently an advantage which enabled him to kill his pursuer. After the close of the war he settled down to quiet and domestic pursuits. His great natural capabilities for business brought ample rewards for his diligence and enterprise; the Four Corners in Milton, where he established himself, becoming a nucleus, around which population and industry soon gathered and continued to increase. The hospitalities of his house were liberal to a degree not easily imagined now; and, his charity to the poor was even more generous than his entertainment of the stranger. He was a gentle and amiable man, with tastes befitting rural life. A tender husband and father, he was not less useful and exemplary as a citizen. Leaving Milton in 1805, he, in partnership with Uriah Marvin, conducted a business, in Albany, in West India goods and the produce of the country. Mr. B. continued in business until his death of a prevailing epidemic, May 10, 1813. Ch.

William, son of Nathaniel[4] (10) Benedict, b. Dec. 30, 1798, and d. Jan. 8, 1854; m. 2d, June 19, 1856, Mrs. Anna Elizabeth Farnsworth, dau. James and Nancy Russell, formerly of Boston. He was a native of Norwalk, Ct., and early distinguished for his intelligent energy in business. Being an apprentice to the printing business in the office of the Norwalk Gazette, at the age of nineteen he bought his time and became the proprietor, editor and publisher of the paper, which he continued until Jan., 1833, when he removed to New York and became the proprietor and publisher of the New York Evangelist, in connection with Rev. Joshua Leavitt. He disposed of the Evangelist in 1837, and soon after became the publisher of the Emancipator and other publications of the American and the American and Foreign Anti-Slavery Society, while at the same time carrying on his printing and publishing business. In 1848 he projected the publication of a new Evangelical religious newspaper, to be devoted to the interest and cause of congregationalism. This plan was subsequently modified, and in Dec. of that year he commenced the publication of the Independent, under the auspices of Rev. Drs. Bacon, Thompson and Storrs, as editors, Dr. Leavitt, as assistant, and Messrs S. B. Hunt, S. B. Chittenden, Bowen and McNamee, as proprietors. In Dec., 1853, he relinquished his connection with the paper, and continued his printing and publishing business until March, 1854, when his office was totally destroyed by fire. Latterly, he has conducted an extensive real estate agency. Mr. B. was for some years clerk of the Congregational church at Norwalk. On his removal to N. Y., he joined what is now Thirteenth street Presbyterian church, of which he became a trustee and an elder. Leaving this church, to aid in the organization of the Broadway Tabernacle church, he became a trustee and Deacon, and so remained till it was changed into a Presbyterian church. He died Nov. 10, 1869. His funeral sermon was preached by Dr. J. P. Thompson, from the text "diligent in business, fervent in spirit, serving the Lord." (See Hall's Hist. Norwalk, Ct., p. 319.) 1799. "While fitting for college, at Franklin, Delaware county, in 1814, he was drafted into the army during the absence of his father, and ordered to march the next day for the defense of New York, then threatened with an attack by the British fleet. He remained in the service about two months, when his father procured a substitute for him, and he returned to his studies. He was examined and passed for admission to Hamilton College, but, the family removing to Chatham, he entered, Sept., 1815, the sophomore class of Williams College, and graduated in 1818, with the highest honors. After graduating he was, successively, principal of the academy in Westfield, Mass., tutor three years in Williams College, principal of the academy in Newburgh, professor in the University of Vermont, where he filled the chairs of mathematics, natural philosophy, chemistry and natural history, teaching chemistry in the university and in the medical college. He was secretary of the board of trustees for many years, and at separate periods was treasurer. In 1847 he closed his connection with the institution in consequence of ill health. During his professorship, while Prof. Farrand N. Benedict was engaged in the surveys and observations of the mountains of Northern New York, Prof. G. W. B. made observations at Burlington to synchronize with those at the superior stations, and their merit was acknowledged in Prof. Emmons's Geology of New York. In the language of one of his associate professors, who was in constant intimacy with him for many years: 'The University of Vermont, apparently expiring from the effects of the War of 1812, and from subsequent calamities, he inspired with new life. It is not invidious to his associates, who labored with him through this trying period of the institution, to say that he was preeminently efficient in originating and executing the measures that ultimately resulted in its renewed prosperity. Some of them have since been adopted by most of the American colleges. The course of study was remodeled, systematized, and enlarged, the standard of scholarship elevated, and a more vigorous discipline enforced. His paternal and genial intercourse with the students, gained for him a popularity among them that was rarely interrupted. He brought to bear upon the multiplied subjects of thought and labor to which the necessities of the institution called him, a clear and active mind, versatile powers and general erudition.' He was afterwards for many years connected with the public press, as proprietor and editor of the Burlington Free Press, a daily and weekly newspaper. He was twice elected to the senate of Vermont, after which he declined all candidacy for political office, although he has never ceased to feel a deep and patriotic interest in public affairs. He received the degree of LL. D. from the University of Vermont. A discourse delivered by him before the literary societies of the University of Vermont, on New England educational Institutions in relation to American Government, was published in 1844. He has resided at Burlington since 1825." Ch. d.at Burlington,Vt.9-24-1871, she d.2-26-1886.

A new judicial district of the U. S. the Vermont and Boston Telegraph Co. In 1853 he became part proprietor and associate editor of the Burlington daily and weekly Free Press, and is now editor-in-chief of that paper. In 1860 he was appointed by President Lincoln, postmaster of Burlington, and held that office four years. In the same year he was elected president of the Vermont and Boston Telegraph Co., and held that office two years. In August, 1862, he enlisted as a private in Co. C, 12th Regt. Vermont Vols. In Jan., 1863, he was promoted to be lieutenant and aid-de-camp on the staff of the brigade commander. He was in the battle of Gettysburg, July 1st, 2d and 3d, 1863, as aid-de-camp on the staff of Gen. Geo. J. Stannard, commanding the 2d brigade Vt. Vols. He was the first man of the brigade on the field, having been sent forward to announce to the division commander the approach of the brigade. He was engaged on Cemetery Hill on the second day, and in the repulse of Longstreet on the left centre in the latter part of that day. On the third day he was in the thickest of the battle, in the front line on the left centre, assisting in executing the flank attack upon Pickett's division, which was mainly instrumental in repelling its charge upon our lines; and with another staff-officer caught Gen. Hancock as he fell from his horse, severely wounded. A spent ball struck him with force enough to bend in a copper pistol cartridge in his cartridge-box, but happily did not explode it. An account of the part taken by the Vermont troops in that battle was afterwards prepared by him and read before the Vermont Historical Society in 1864, and, in 1866 it was published under the title of Vermont at Gettysburg. A second edition was published in 1870. On the expiration of his term of service, he was honorably mustered out, July 14, 1863. In 1865 he held the office of Asst. Insp. General, with the rank of Major, in the Vermont militia, and in 1866 he was appointed aid-de-camp on the staff of Gov. Paul Dillingham, with rank of Colonel. Moses Bloodgood of New York, b. Sept. 2, 1809. "The family removed to New York in 1803. In early life he had some experience in teaching, commencing in a common school in 1816, and ending as a tutor in Williams College in 1824. He entered the sophomore class in September, 1818, and graduated in 1821, when he took charge of the academy in Johnstown, and subsequently taught in the academy in Newburgh. As tutor in college, he taught the class of 1825 when juniors, and the class of 1826 when sophomores. His professional studies completed, at the end of the year 1824 he entered upon the practice of the law in the city of New York, where he has ever since been, and is now, a successful practitioner. When the common school system was extended to the city of

New York, he was chosen among the first trustees of common schools, and subsequently, in 1850, was elected a member of the board of education for the city, of which board he was president for several years. He resigned his office as member of the board of education, in 1863, not, however, until he was generally recognized as among the first who were instrumental in consolidating and maturing the entire school system of New York city. The services he rendered — cooperating with like-minded men — in rearing the free academy, now the College of New York, are admitted by all. He was among the select number who confessedly laid the foundations of that 'Areopagus and royal home' of college advantages for the masses, in the city of N. Y. In 1855, he was appointed, by the legislature, one of the Board of Regents of the University of the State, which office he still holds. In 1840, he was elected a member of the common council of the city of New York. In 1848, he was a member of the state legislature, as, also, in 1864. He is an elder in the Reformed church, and was a member of the general synod in 1868. Mr. B. is the author of The American Admiralty, of which a new and enlarged edition is this year (1870) published; of A Run through Europe, a book of travels, of which the third edition was published in 1868; of the Hymn of Hildebert, and other mediæval hymns, with translations, of which a new and enlarged edition was published in 1869, and of various pamphlets, reviews, speeches, and addresses, on literary, religious, and political subjects, published at different times during the last thirty years, including The Beginning of America, the anniversary discourse before the New York Historical Society in 1863. In 1840, he delivered the anniversary address before the society of alumni of Williams College, and has established several prizes in that college. His degree of LL. D. was given him by Rutgers College, in 1865. This record, like all such, necessarily furnishes only a very imperfect view of Mr. Benedict's long and earnest professional and literary life. He assumed with confidence the grave responsibilities of manhood, when a mere boy, and from that time onward devoted himself with singular patience and steadiness of purpose, to the work of life. As a lawyer, the American bar will not permit any other place to be finally assigned him, except among the very first, if not the first, in the front rank of admiralty lawyers. His name has been made familiar to the profession throughout the country, by the work referred to above, which is everywhere a standard text-book; but far more by his practice as an admiralty lawyer, which, for nearly a half century, has been coextensive with our Atlantic coast. It is due to a record of this kind to fix, if possible, and perpetuate other personal characteristics. Mr. Benedict is distinguished as a hard worker outside his profession. As an officer of the New York Historical Society, a member of its executive committee for twenty-eight years, and now the chairman of that committee; as, also, in his relations as officer to various other societies — religious, charitable, and educational — his labors have been great. He has been a trustee of Williams College since 1855; manager of the association for improving the condition of the poor, since its organization, in 1848; manager of the American Art Union while it existed, and he has also been a governor of the State Woman's Hospital since its incorporation. Coleridge, in one of his aphorisms, asserts that there is no higher evidence of genius than the ability to maintain, in advancing years, the fresh, genial feelings of youth. All who know Mr. Benedict, will admit at once that he comes within Coleridge's rule. He is now, to all appearances, as laborious, as earnest, as hopeful, as much interested in his profession, and in plans for benefiting his fellow men, as when he first struck out. He is now interested as much as ever in the social, political, and moral questions which are engaging the attention of advancing minds, and, in aid of their solution, he brings not only ripeness, but wonderful freshness. The writer of this notice has endeavored to be a faithful contributor to history, and, in dismissing the subject of this notice, he simply says that he has nothing to fear from the impartial judgment of cotemporaries; as for the rest, it may be safely left to a future age, if not to other countries." 272. ABNER[7] (Rev. Joel Tyler,[6] Rev. Abner,[5] Peter,[4] James,[3] John,[2] Thomas[1]), b. Jan. 18, 1805, New Windsor; m. July 29, 1834, Harriet C., dau. Charles and Catharine Kohler, b. Dec. 11, 1813. "He was educated at the Philosophical Seminary of Practical Science, at Troy. After graduating he devoted himself to teaching, and for a short time, as Professor of Chemistry and Natural Science. He soon, however, entered on the study of law in the city of New York, where he was admitted to the bar in the year 1832, and practised this profession until his death. Mr. Benedict was a man of strong sense and sound judgment; he possessed a mind of great independence. His conclusions were strictly his own (borrowing no color from the authority of mere name), and when formed, they were asserted with self-relying boldness, and maintained with unflinching firmness. He was a sound lawyer and a successful advocate; as a speaker he was exceedingly impressive, sententious and forcible. In social life, his wit and humor abounded, and together with the habitual use of the most expressive and purest English, gave to his conversation a somewhat epigrammatic and sententious character; but, under the control of his characteristic kindness of disposition, his wit was always without sting and his humor free from offensive raillery. He possessed great energy and determination of character, and called them into requisition whenever the object seemed to him to demand their exercise. He possessed a refined and cultivated taste, not only in literature, but also in art. He was unpretending, seeking no unearned reputation and making no ostentatious display of his intellectual endowments or of his prosperity. Mr. Benedict's sympathies were of the kindest character. He was social, hospitable, and exceedingly agreeable as a companion, never failing, notwithstanding his brusque manner, to treat his intimates with the same politeness that he extended to his mere acquaintances and strangers. Mr. Benedict was unaffectedly benevolent. The poor he never sent empty away, nor passed without leaving his mite. Many of us remember him as one of the original members of that excellent and noiseless charity, the Prison Association of New York. Here he labored assiduously in visiting dungeons and prisons, and in extending aid to those who, on being liberated from confinement, needed the aid of some kind hand to lead them in the ways of honest exertion, and secure them from temptations to crime. For these arduous labors there could be no consideration, no reward, except that which springs up in every benevolent heart from the performance of a benevolent action." Mr. B. and wife were lost in the steamship Arctic, which sunk after a collision with the Vesta, in 1854. We have quoted the words of Mr. E. Burr, who delivered a eulogy upon Mr. B. at a meeting of the New York bar, July 15, 1855. Ch.

George Kohler, b. Aug. 9, 1835. He entered the college of New York (then Free Academy), and after remaining a year, left to accompany his father to Europe. Soon after the death of his father, he entered the counting-room of Mr. John A. Machado, an extensive shipping merchant in the African trade; and, after becoming acquainted with the business, spent some time at Gambia, in Africa, as a resident clerk, agent, and finally as partner, but, before the partnership was fully in progress, the great commercial revulsion of 1857 overwhelmed Mr. M., and Mr. Benedict returned to New York. He was soon employed by another house to proceed with a cargo to the English colony of Sierra Leone, and remain there as resident commercial agent. He died there, May 13, 1859, of the yellow fever. The newspapers of the colony spoke highly of him. A private letter said: "His funeral was attended by every one in the colony. Every respect was paid to his memory. The colors at the American consulate and on all the shipping in the harbor, were half-masted. He was deeply regretted by all, and by none more than ourselves."

Abner Raleigh, b. Nov. 13, 1839. "He was educated in the schools and University of Burlington, Vt., where he was a universal favorite. In him, to energy, magnanimity and high spirit were added the attractions of a fine figure, and a face that was the mobile mirror of his noble nature. In 1854, he lost his parents in the Arctic, and shortly after, an elder sister and brother were taken from him. These terrible bereavements preyed upon his feelings and gave rise to a despondency which checked his naturally cheerful humor and playful wit. Like all men of intellectual refinement, he was modest and reserved. In short, he seems to have had all those delicate characteristics that were once popularly believed to unfit the possessor for 'the dread experience of arms.' Immediately after the breaking out of the war, he volunteered as a private in Col. Butterfield's regiment, which was one of the three that first left New York city for the seat of war. In August, 1861, however, he left the volunteer service, having reeeived a commission as 2d Lieut. in the Fourth regular infantry. By his gallantry and coolness at Gaines' Mills, a most desperate and bloody fight, he won his first brevet. At second Bull Run, his clothing was repeatedly cut by bullets; at Antietam, he was under heavy fire. At Fredericksburg, Major Benedict commanded forty men of the strong picket line, that in the darkness, was pushed up to the enemy's main line, while our beaten army was retreating across the river. The orders were to hold position until relieved, and the intention was to withdraw the picket line before daylight should reveal its nearness to the enemy. By some fatal mistake, the line was not relieved as directed, and at daylight the enemy, from most destructive short range, opened fire. While Major Benedict was animating his men by his voice and his example, an officer of his brigade that was in full sight of the fight, noticing that he was made a special mark for the sharpshooters, said: 'Why the devil don't he walk zigzag?' Major Dryer, of the Fourth infantry, replied: 'Don't you know that Benedict is the last man to ever walk zigzag, with a brigade looking at him?' Major Benedict soon after fell, shot through the lungs with a minié ball, and was only rescued by the devotion of his men, several of whom were killed and wounded while carrying him out of fire, a gallant Irish sergeant falling dead with a bullet through his head, and the cheer, 'Hurrah! we've saved the lieutenant,' on his lips. This action gave him his second brevet. Wounded on the 14th of Dec., 1862, in less than three months Major Benedict was at Washington, reporting for duty, with his wound still open at the breast and back. Finally he got permission to go to the field, and joined his regiment at Chancellorsville, while the battle was in progress. At Gettysburg the wounding of his superiors placed him in command of his regiment, and he handled it amid all the carnage of that terrible day with great credit to himself. Shortly after Gettysburg, his health began to fail him, his wounded lung showing evident signs of weakness and irritation. In spite of his failing health, he still sought field duty, and for some time commanded the Fourth infantry as the body guard of Lieut.-General Grant's headquarters during the Petersburg campaign. He was last stationed at Plattsburg barracks, leaving there to seek a warmer station, but the gallant fellow had been living for a year on nothing but sheer pluck, and from this time he gradually sank, until death relieved him from his great suffering, June 15, 1867. The funeral took place from the house of his uncle, Hon. E. C. Benedict, New York city. The usual religious services were held at the house, and a detachment of troops from Governor's Island, accompanied by the military band and field drum corps, gave the body military escort. To the sound of the long pealing dirges and muffled drums, the body of the hero, wrapped in the folds of the flag for which he died, was borne to the tomb."

ERASTUS CARLTON, b. April 26, 1846; m. Dec. 24, 1868, Clara A., dau. Rev. James C. and Sarah Richmond. "At the age of 16 he was nominated for a cadetship in the Naval Academy, and came to New York to prepare for his examination. He, however, unknown to his uncle and guardian, Erastus C. Benedict, enlisted in the 102d N. Y. Vols., then in the field in Virginia, under the assumed name of Joseph Prentiss. Ten days after he joined his regiment it went into the battle of Cedar Mountain, and he was left on the field wounded in the thigh, which was thereby paralysed. He succeeded in reaching our lines, was placed in hospital, and after several months discharged as disabled and entitled to a pension. Returning to his uncle's house, he there found his brother Abner lying, having been shot through the lungs at Fredericksburg. The hospital experience of Erastus made him a useful companion to his sick brother. Under new treatment his disability ceased, and he reenlisted, but was rejected by the examining surgeon. Being then sent to an academy in the interior, by his guardian, he remained a few weeks, and then enlisted in the 12th N. Y. cavalry as a corporal, and remained with the regiment, serving in N. C., until the end of the war.. He then resumed his studies, but enlisted in a few months in the regular cavalry, and was sent to the western plains Being under age, and having enlisted without the consent of his guardian, he was finally discharged." He was soon induced to remove to Huntingdon, Pa., to take charge of the Huntingdon Journal, a political newspaper, as publisher and editor. After proper preparatory studies he was admitted to the bar and practised law there with ability and success, his success being impaired by his connection with journalism and party politics. In 1849 he was appointed deputy secretary of state of Pennsylvania, and removed to Harrisburgh, the political capital of the state, continuing his practice as counsel; subsequently, having removed again to Huntingdon, he resumed his practice fully. In 1855 he was chosen clerk of the house of representatives of Pennsylvania. In 1863 he was elected a member of that body, and in 1864 was again elected clerk, and continued to fill the office by reelection till his death. During the rebellion he was secretary of the central state committee of the union party residing during the election campaign in Philadelphia, and devoting himself constantly to the duties of that office as practical manager. He was a good lawyer, an able advocate, a sagacious and patriotic politician, an eloquent and convincing public speaker on political topics, a laborious legislator, a reliable friend, a good citizen, and a consistent Christian, a member of the Presbyterian church. He then practised civil engineering in the employ of private companies and of the state in Western New York, and was principal of the high school at Rochester till 1831. In the autumn of that year he was appointed to the charge of the academy in Upperville, Va., where he remained till he was called to the professorship of mathematics in the University of Vermont. After a short period the department of civil engineering was added to his professorship. He filled these chairs with distinguished ability and reputation for twenty years, when the state of his wife's health compelled him to resign his professorship and seek a change of scene and climate in her native region. College, and from the University of Vermont. At the time of his appointment to his professorship, he was declared by that eminent scholar and man of science, Professor Strong (in a letter recommending his appointment to another college), to be the first mathematician of his age, in the United States, and ever since he has been a profound student for the mere love of scientific investigation and knowledge. The circumstances of his wife's illness deferred, and finally compelled him to abandon his purpose of preparing for the press some works on the higher mathematics, and especially one on curves, of a new and original character. His contributions, however, to the scientific journals, were numerous and valuable. Some of them (prize discussions) were spoken of in high terms by cotemporary men of science. Besides these he has written hydrographical and topographical reports in which were discussed abstract practical subjects, such as rail road motion and the conditions of strength and endurance of telegraph wires under the influence of winds, sleet, etc. His greatest works are his report to Professor Emmons on the altitudes of the Adirondack plateau, and lakes and mountain peaks, and his report to the New York senate of his survey of a line of slackwater navigation through the wilderness of Northern New York, from Lake Champlain to the Black River; that vast mountain region having been explored by him for the three-fold purpose of ascertaining its productive value, its geographical geology, and its possibilities for internal communication. Professor Emmons, the state geologist, who was then preparing his volume of the great national work, the Natural History of New York, applied to Prof. B. to review the whole subject, and his communication to Prof. E. was deemed by him to be of sufficient importance to be preserved in durable form, and, with all its details, it was printed in the report to the state, pp. 109–212. This communication enters somewhat into the subject of the improvement of that region by slackwater navigation, which subject he treated at much greater length, and with great ability in his report to the senate of New York, which has been mentioned. His explanations and surveys have been the basis of all the plans for developing that great mineral district, and which have all finally yielded to the Adirondack rail road, now in course of construction. In a great rail road controversy in Vermont, he was appointed by the supreme court, together with Hon. Jacob Collamer, ex-U. S. senator and postmaster general of the U. S., and the Hon. George F. Edmunds, the present U. S. senator, to hear and determine the controversy as referees. They sat together several weeks on the bench at Montpelier, the capital of the state, to hear the case. Prof. B. in the midst of all his abstractions, has kept fresh his classical learning, cultivated a forcible and agreeable style, logical, clear and exact, and performed his part in the amenities of social life, and has always been characterized by the greatest simplicity, modesty and good nature. He is well entitled to be called a great man." *

He applied himself to his studies with diligence and with highly creditable success, until a chronic weakness of the eyes compelled him to abandon the hope of a liberal education. His contemplative and philosophical turn of mind, notwithstanding this and other discouragements, led him to confine himself to intellectual pursuits. He continued, therefore, through life to indulge his taste for philosophy by general reading and thought on these abstruse subjects. Leaving his father's house in 1824, he passed the remaining years of his life in various localities of the southern and south-western states, in teaching and self-culture. During this period he wrote and prepared for the press an elaborate work on the prophecies of Holy Writ. The manuscript is now (1870) in the custody of his brother Farrand, and evinces labor and original research. Owing to the convulsions of the civil war, and his inadequate health, or probable decease, the work remains only in manuscript.

His father having died in December, 1831, and his mother the following month, he became a member of the family of his cousin, Rev. Richard Hutson Benedict, and with him, went, at the age of eleven years, to Oakland county, Mich., then a wilderness. The desire of knowledge urged him to overcome the difficulties in his way. Obliged to perform certain duties on the farm, he was accustomed to perform them, in winter, several hours before daylight, and then tramp four miles through the snow to the nearest settlement and school-house, and, after school and the tramp home, more work awaited him. So he lived until the fall of 1837, when he went into the family of his brother Farrand, in Burlington, Vt., and fitted for college in the Burlington high school. He entered the University of Vermont in 1839, and was graduated with honor in 1843. His instructors in college were the distinguished scholars: the Rev. Dr. Wheeler, president; Dr.

Marsh, professor of metaphysics; Dr. Torrey, of Latin and Greek; Farrand N. Benedict (his brother), of mathematics; and George W. Benedict (his cousin), of chemistry and natural history; and he has always enjoyed their confidence and friendship. His brother Abner was his class-mate and chum, and both graduated with honor. He showed no special predeliction for any one branch of learning, but that equal love for all which has ever since characterized him. After graduation, he was employed in civil engineering, until his health required him to relinquish that occupation. He was then engaged in private teaching until 1848, when he took charge of the Burlington High school, in which he had been prepared for college. Under his management, the institution had unwonted prosperity, the number of scholars increasing rapidly five-fold. In 1850 he removed to New York city, and after giving private instruction for about a year, he was appointed tutor of mathematics in the Free Academy, since known as the College of the city of New York. In 1852 he was appointed professor of civil engineering, and in 1857, adjunct professor of mathematics, in the same institution. His only published work is a treatise on Algebra, which in a short time ran through nine editions. He applied his powers with singular zeal and affection to the laborious duties of his professorship. Graduates of the New York College are to be found in every state of the union, occupying positions of honor and trust, who will remember him affectionately as an indefatigable worker in their interest, and many of them as a valued counsellor and friend. In his relations to the faculty, his voice was ever in favor of the highest standard of scholarship compatible with the practical character which at the start was sought to be impressed upon the institution. Mr. Benedict's private library, which has been steadily growing from the time he left college, is a pretty fair measure of the scope and range of his studies, and his taste for the quiet life of a student. Of this library, Dr. Torrey, the professor referred to above, and the translator of Neander's History of the Christian Church, and a scholar of fine bibliographical knowledge, said to the writer of this notice, that it was, for its size, among the most select he had seen. His father's family was then broken up and scattered, no two of its members meeting for several years. This separation occurring when he was so young, it required in after years a formal introduction to make him known again to each of his brothers and sisters. He was taken into the family of his brother, Farrand N., when ten years old. He was graduated at the University of Vermont in 1843, and received the degree of A. M. in 1846. The following year he passed as preceptor of the Milton Academy in Vermont. He had charge of the Essex county Academy, Westport, through the year 1845. In the years 1846 and 1847 he edited the Whitehall Chronicle, at Whitehall, when he removed to New York city, where he was admitted to the bar in January, 1848, and where he has since been a successful practitioner. During the time he edited the Chronicle, the circulation of the paper was more than double as the result of his literary contributions. He acquired a reputation in college as a writer of force, which reputation has been maintained by occasional addresses and contributions to newspapers and periodicals. An article by him on the admiralty law in Hunt's Merchants' Magagine, was widely noticed at the time as an able, readable and valuable paper. It is to be found in the 23d vol. of that work. He delivered the annual address (1869) before the Franklin Electrical Institute. Nervous and imaginative by inheritance, he is very vivacious, impulsive and emotional. He was vice-president of a union league club in Westchester Co., throughout the late war, which office was no sinecure. His readings are general, with a proclivity to philosophical and metaphysical enquiry, and to abstract thought. In social intercourse his conversational powers are striking. He is epigrammatic, humorous, often witty, always 'short, clear and surprising,' and ready at repartee. He is a good lawyer, but his characteristic habits and tastes have prevented professional subjects from absorbing his mind and efforts, and carrying him to that eminence at the bar, which he might easily have attained. Whereever he has been known, he has been esteemed an earnest, thoughtful scholar, and has always identified himself, in small things as well as great, with the party of progress and reform, fighting against any odds in the fullest confidence that the right is sure to prevail sooner or later." * Spencer Stafford was the youngest son of Col. Joab, son of Thomas, son of Samuel, son of Thomas Stafford, who was born 1605, in Warwickshire, England, came to Plymouth, New England, in or about the year 1626, settled at Warwick, R. I., in 1652, and died there in 1677. Col. Joab was one of the earliest and principal settlers of the town of Cheshire, Berkshire Co., Mass., removing from Rhode Island in the year 1767. He was a captain in the Revolutionary war, and was pensioned for a wound received in the battle of Bennington, August 16, 1777. He died at Cheshire, Nov. 23, 1801. His son, Spencer, was born May 10, 1772, settled at Albany in 1783, where he married Sept. 7, 1790, Dorothea, fourth child of Bernardus and Ellen (Clark) Hallenbake. Mr. Stafford and a brother engaged in the hardware trade, and they soon became "men of extensive business connections" and are mentioned in the Recollections of Albany, as among the "principal merchants of the city, those who gave life and character to its business interests." See Contribution to a Stafford Genealogy.

Bernardus Halenbake, father of Dorothea Stafford, was a son of Hendrik, who was a son of Isaac Casparse, who was a son of the original settler Caspar Jacobse Halenbeek, who made his will in 1685. The estate of Hendrik Halenbake originally comprised what is now the southern section of Albany, extending from Plain to Arch street, where it adjoined the farm of Gen. Schuyler, and having the river for its eastern and Eagle street for its western boundaries. This, with an island in the river, and lands in other places, in all 1800 acres, constituted the Halenbeek estate. Munsell's Hist. Colls., vol. II, pp. 410–416.

robust, masculine, and active even to restlessness. An uncommonly inquisitive spirit led him to scrutinize closely whatever passed within his notice, and when, at the age of twenty, he left Milton to reside in Albany, there were few things in rural economy, or in business as then done, that he did not perfectly understand. In 1806, having attained legal age, he was admitted a partner in the firm of Marvin Benedict & Co., which his father had established in Albany the year before. In 1813, this firm was dissolved by the death of Uriah Benedict. In 1815 he became a partner in the firm of his father-in-law, Staffords, Spencer & Co. The hardware business proved especially agreeable to him, and he never forsook it during his business life. His connection with his father-in-law, in mercantile relations, ceased in 1825, and never was renewed. Thenceforth, he was senior in all his partnerships, and they were numerous. Although he was, himself, always a resident of Albany, he had partners and establishments elsewhere, at various times, especially in Utica, Rochester and New York. His activity, enterprise and public spirit, soon placed him in the front rank of the leading men of the city; and every project designed to increase its business, wealth, population or attractiveness, found in him an energetic supporter. Having taken an active part in establishing the Commercial Bank, in 1826, he was appointed one of its first board of directors, and he remained one, so long as he was in business. He was, also, a director of the Albany Insurance Company. About the same time he became greatly interested in promoting steam navigation on the Hudson river, and was stockholder and director in several associations formed for that purpose. In 1833, the Utica and Schenectady rail road company was incorporated, and he was named a corporator. He was also chosen director on the organization of the company, and was continued in the board until 1847, when he declined to serve longer. The construction of this road was attended with difficulties hardly to be imagined now. There was no precedent for anything; a very few short lines of rail road only having been built in the country at that time. As a member of the executive committee of the board, he devoted days and nights to the service of the corporation. The then engineer of construction, and, subsequently, superintendent for fifteen consecutive years, William C. Young, writing in 1862, of Mr. Benedict's connection with the enterprise, says: "His influence was positive and effective in the organization and management of the Utica and Schenectady rail road, and contributed to a successful result in general and in detail, and that inaugurated a system of economy and practicabilities in the rail road system, which was the prevailing one for the time." The Albany and West Stockbridge rail road received his support from its inception, and he served it as a director for many years. He held the same relation to the Saratoga and Schenectady rail road, and took a leading part in its location, construction and management. The public works of internal improvement, especially the canals, were objects of much interest and solicitude to him. Ex-canal commissioner, Asa Whitney, says: "The canal system of the state was then (1839) occupying a prominent place in the public mind, particularly the enlargement of the Erie canal. Mr. Benedict was among the most prominent and efficient advocates of prosecuting the enlargement to completion. My connection with the project as a canal commissioner, brought me in contact with the most prominent men of the state, who interested themselves in the question; and the opinions of none were more respected and deferred to, than those of Lewis Benedict."

It would not consist with the limits or the design of this paper to recount with even an approximation to completeness, the multiform labors Mr. Benedict performed, the sacrifices of business and money he offered, the anxieties and trials he endured through long years, in order to advance the cause of good government and universal freedom. To do that, would require a history of all the phases of faith that parties exhibited, and the vicissitudes of fortune they encountered during his long life, together with a narrative of his personal experiences that alone would fill a volume. It is enough to say that, in devising, recruiting, and cherishing the political organizations whose course, at times, seemed erratic and its aims shifting, to such as knew not of a certain steady purpose, of which the far-sighted statesmen who shaped its ends never lost sight; and which finally disclosed its true mission in the sublime exhibitions of force and patience made by the republican party of the Civil War, he was efficient and faithful; and although darker days than the liberal party saw in the course of its protracted struggle never dawned upon the country, neither the hope nor the spirits of its leaders ever flagged. The day is past when any can contemn the wisdom, doubt the patriotism, or deny the services of that illustrious triumvirate, "Seward, Weed, and Greeley," and escape the imputation that themselves are neither wise, patriotic, nor truthful. Of the little company who shared in the councils of which this party was born, who framed its issues, organized its forces, planned its campaigns and then fought them, who moderated its triumphs and retrieved its defeats, by all of which its growth was first protected and then assured, next to those eminent men, who comes, if not Lewis Benedict, with his fertile brain, his tireless and gratuitous industry, his invincible courage?

Three of Mr. Benedict's colaborers, fitted by long and intimate association to speak of his qualities, and from their position the best acquainted with the nature, extent, and value of his services, have recorded their opinions of him and his works. On an occasion which made it proper for Mr. Weed to speak in this behalf, he said: "In the darkest days of Jacksonism and Van Burenism, when the Albany regency wielded with an iron despotism the power of the general, state, and city governments, Mr. Benedict was foremost, in services and sacrifices, among the few who upheld the whig banner. As chairman of the whig state committee, for six memorable years, he was the political engineer who organized and guided the whig phalanx. To him there were no terrors in defeat. Beaten in one campaign he immediately set about a reorganization for another. In 1837 he established the Jeffersonian, a paper which contributed largely to the successes which followed. In the great presidential conflict of 1840, Mr. Benedict, abandoning his own business, gave himself up to the whig party. * * * Further back, in 1824, he aided essentially in carrying this state for John Quincy Adams, as President. After our success in 1837, Mr. Benedict was invited to take the office of state treasurer, but he declined that and other stations." Governor Seward, addressing him in 1843, wrote: "* * * there would have been no successful whig party without your energetic and indomitable efforts." Mr. Greeley, in an obituary notice, said: "He was probably more influential in the politics of our state for a series of years, than any other private citizen."

In domestic and social relations, Mr. Benedict revealed softnesses and sympathies which a somewhat brusque manner, and a positiveness in statement quite common with him, gave no token that he possessed. He had a high respect for science and learning, but to his desire to promote their diffusion was added an equally strong one to patronize every means devised by religious thoughtfulness for the spread of the gospel, and especially for every means of instruction that promised to increase the knowledge and elevate the morals of the youth of the country. His conspicuous connection with public questions and party management, made him acquainted with men of parallel pursuits and position, of all shades of political belief, and it was one of his pleasures to assemble them in his own home, as if to demonstrate how completely he excluded from the sacred retreats of private life, the asperities and antagonisms in which he so freely indulged outside of those enclosures. These hospitable modes characterized his social life during his long career as a politician and merchant.

The 14th of January, 1862, was the fiftieth anniversary of his marriage, and he commemorated it by a golden wedding. Notwithstanding the expectation of life reasonably justified by his high physical and mental condition on that evening, in six months thereafter Lewis Benedict had no existence save in memory. He died July 15th, 1862.

Mrs. Benedict survived more than seven years, dying Dec. 30, 1869. She was a woman whose prominent characteristics were of the kind that command respect and win regard. She devoted herself to the duties that belonged to the varying relations of her life. As a daughter she was dutiful to a degree that evoked the blessing of her father on his death-bed, because she had never caused him an anxiety in all her life. As a wife and mother she was a model of tenderness and fidelity toward her husband, and of love and thoughtfulness for her children. She assumed the obligations of religion, and confessed those she owed to the world around her; discharging the one class with diligence and fervency of spirit, and the other with charity for the infirmities of the weak and erring, sympathy for the afflicted, help for the needy, encouragement for the struggling, and applause for such as did well. She was singularly discreet in speech, and always mindful of the interests of peace, so that she lived encompassed by friends, and died without an enemy. Lewis, b. Sept. 2, 1817. His early studies were prosecuted at Aurora, Cayuga Co., but his preparation for college was made mainly at the Albany Academy. In 1834 he entered the sophomore class of Williams College, and graduated in 1837. Three years after he delivered the Master's Oration. As a boy, he was noted for his zeal and diligence in study, and not less for enterprise in play. The records of the Albany Academy attest his success in competitive examinations; and it is well remembered, by many who shared in them, how, after sweeping the prizes for scholarship, he would resort to the play ground, and exhibit equal superiority in those games and contests, which are alike the peril and delight of robust and ambitious boyhood. His collegiate career resembled his academic — it was successful to whatever degree he chose to make it. While a student of the law, he maintained sufficient ardor of pursuit to enable him to acquire a knowledge of the elements of that science; but his taste for general literature was decided enough to save him from engrossment by studies purely professional. His legal studies were directed by the Hon. John C. Spencer, at Canandaigua, and on his admission to the bar, in January, 1841, Marcus T. Reynolds, then at the zenith of his professional fame and intellectual vigor, received him as his partner in the law. He was subsequently admitted to the state and federal courts. In 1845 he was appointed city attorney, and was reappointed for a second term. In 1847 he was appointed judge advocate general, on the staff of Gov. John Young. In 1848 he was elected surrogate of the city and county of Albany for four years. In 1849 he was appointed judge advocate general by Gov. Hamilton Fish. In 1852, and again in 1860, he received the whig nomination for city recorder. In 1854 he was appointed one of the three commissioners to report on the pecuniary and other conditions of the several state prisons, and to devise laws for their better regulation and discipline. The committee made a voluminous report to the assembly in 1855. In the fall of 1860 he was nominated by the union men of the district for member of assembly, and was the only union candidate elected from the county. His political career closed in 1860. He was always a leader. He was often delegate to conventions, state and county, chairman of committees, general and local, a prolific author of addresses and resolutions, and a frequent speaker at political assemblages. As a surrogate the clearness of his mind and the equity of his convictions receive some illustration from the circumstance that of the many judgments pronounced by him, during his considerable term, but one, and that made in his noviciate, is known to have been reversed by an appellate tribunal. On the outbreak of the rebellion, he early offered his services to the governor. Declining offers of higher positions, to which, as a civilian, he feared himself unsuited, he finally accepted the lieutenant colonelcy of the Second Fire Zouaves

Bvt. Brig. Gen. U.S. Vols

(73d N. Y. Vols.). This regiment made a part of the Excelsior Brigade under Gen. Sickles, took part in the siege of Yorktown, and was the first to plant its colors upon the ramparts after the evacuation of the place by the rebels. The battle of Williamsburgh, May 5th, 1862, followed, and Col. B. was taken prisoner while bringing up the reserve to reinforce the extreme left which was being persistently assailed by the rebel General Joseph E. Johnston. He was taken to Libby prison, and thence to Salisbury, North Carolina. He was exchanged August 10, 1862, and his exchange was officially announced September 30, 1862. He came home in wretched health, but careful nursing saved his life. He was, as soon as his condition permitted, appointed by Gov. Morgan, colonel 162d New York volunteers. The regiment was ordered to, and arrived at New Orleans, December 15, 1862. About January 10, 1863, Col. Benedict was ordered to Donaldsonville, sixty miles above New Orleans, and was acting brigadier-general at that post. He commanded a brigade at the battle of Port Hudson, June 14, 1863, where his calm bravery excited the admiration of all who witnessed it. The next day Gen. Banks called for one thousand volunteers to storm the enemy's works. Col. B. volunteered to lead one of the two battalions, but the fall of Vicksburg made the attack unnecessary, and the forlorn hope lost the opportunity of illustrating its bravery and patriotism. About the middle of August Gen. Banks reorganized the army, and put Col. Benedict in command of the First Brigade, Third Division of the Nineteenth Army Corps. He was engaged in the expedition against Sabine city under Gen. Franklin, and soon afterward was ordered to Brashear city, in western Louisiana. In the skirmish near Vermillion Bayou, he had the satisfaction of stopping the advance of the rebels who were driving our cavalry before them. His position was so well taken that his small force succeeded in repulsing the large masses of the enemy with a loss of but five killed and wounded. February 2, 1864, he arrived at Franklin, La., where the army was concentrated. Here was organized the Red River expedition. Col. B. was assigned to the command of the Third Brigade, First Division (Gen. Emory) Nineteenth Army Corps. The army moved the 15th of March. On the 8th of April, fifteen miles beyond Pleasant Hill, which was reached by the main army on the 7th, was fought the sanguinary battle of Pleasant Grove, which ended in a victory for the nationals, just as darkness covered the scene. "Nothing," said Gen. Banks in his report, "could surpass in impetuosity the assault of the enemy, but the inflexible steadiness and valor of our troops. The First Division of the Nineteenth Army Corps, by its great bravery in this action, saved the army and navy." Col. Benedict was especially commended for the manner in which he handled his brigade, which was mainly instrumental in effecting this repulse. The rebels receiving reinforcements, renewed the fight on the 9th, at Pleasant Hill, to which place our army had fallen back. The Third Brigade was posted, unsupported, on the extreme left of the line of battle. Towards evening the enemy made a desperate attempt to carry this, our weakest position, falling with several brigades upon Col. Benedict's small force of about 2,000 men. "Outnumbered as well as outflanked, and being without any near support, his brigade fell steadily back, fighting gallantly as they were pushed up the acclivity of Pleasant Hill. In the conflict down the slope at the first shock of the onset, and while rallying his men to a charge, Col. Benedict fell, pierced by five bullets." Lossing adds: "No better or more beloved soldier and citizen than he, gave his life for his country during the war." He was buried with civic and military honors in the Albany Rural Cemetery, May 2, 1864. His nomination as brevet brigadier-general United States volunteers, "for gallant conduct at Port Hudson, to date from March 13, 1865," was confirmed by the senate July 23, 1866. He married, second, July 7, 1678,* Rebecca, dau. of Thomas Andrews of Fairfield, Ct., by whom he had five children, the last two born in Danbury, Ct. In the fall of 1684 and the spring of 1685, he, with his brother James, his brother-in-law James Beebe, Judah Gregory (brother-in-law of James Benedict), and four others, purchased land of the Indians and made the first settlement at Paquiogue (Danbury).† Dr. Samuel Wood, who married Rebecca, dau. of Thomas[1] Benedict, soon followed, and Daniel, youngest son of Thomas[1] Benedict, also, settled there, soon after 1690. When they were apprehensive of danger, all the families used to repair to these two houses, especially nights." Robbins, p. 11.

He had living with him at the time of the alarm, his three sons, Philip, Jonathan and Bartholomew. These seven men, from a single household, all seized their arms and hurried to the field, and they all fell with their captain, whose name was M'Carrican, a man of letters and teacher of the hamlet school. Two days after the battle, a party of twenty Indians visited the house of Mr. Weeks and demanded breakfast. Having obtained their demand, they next informed Mr. W. that he must quit the valley forthwith. The old man remonstrated, 'all my sons have fallen,' said he with emotion, 'and here I am left with fourteen grandchildren, all young and helpless.' * * * * They allowed him his oxen and wagon, with which he took the sobbing women and their little ones back to the county of Orange, whence they had emigrated to Wyoming." He was a Revolutionary soldier and pensioner; settled in the town of Solon, in the spring of 1793. H. C. Goodwin, in his Pioneer Hist. of Cortland Co., 1859, pp. 207–8, says: "As we look over the dim vestiges of the past, and behold the hardy pioneer of civilization penetrating the boundary line which now marks the northern limits of Cortland Co., we feel that his was a hazardous effort, and that a great amount of energy must have been embraced in his wild, romantic character. The foot-prints of civilization had not then penetrated into this dense wilderness. True, the French traders had visited the Indians in their rude cabins, and even established trading posts, but these had disappeared with time and change. Yet through the deep, thick forest of hemlock, maple, elm and basswood, wandered the bold, resolute pioneer, Samuel Benedict, who, in the fall of 1793, located on lot 12. He erected a log citadel and christened it Home." Ch.

117. Jesse Wheeler[6] (Jesse,[5] Thaddeus,[4] Thomas,[3] James,[2] Thomas[1]), b. Dec. 25, 1810, at Black Rock, Ct.; m. July 3, 1833, Frances Ann, dau. Lemuel Coleman of Bridgeport, Ct. "Shortly after his birth, the family removed to Bridgeport, where his father died before he was five years old. His mother was left with a very small patrimony. The ordinary way would have been to husband this and set the boy at work as soon as possible, but she appreciated the value of education for this, her only child, and resolved to use her limited means, mainly, for that purpose. From the necessity of the case, she was extremely economical in everything excepting books and education for her boy. He remained with her until he was twelve years old (using diligently all the educational advantages of the town), when he was sent to a classical school, at Danbury, to prepare for college. He entered Yale College in the autumn of 1826, and remained there about two years, when failing health compelled his mother, on the advice of the physician, to withdraw him. He was then sent abroad; returned in about a year restored in health, and commenced the study of law in the office of J. W. Girard, Esq., of New York city. He was admitted to the bar in November, 1832. He soon formed a business connection with Charles O'Conor, Esq., at a salary of $500 a year, and on this assured income, he was married. Not long after, he was taken into partnership by Mr. O'Conor, with whom he remained about two years. Then a wealthy relative proposed a lucrative engagement in the mercantile line, which, with Mr. O'Conor's approbation, he accepted. After two years experience in mercantile business, ending with the crisis and crash of 1837, he was glad to return to his old profession, and to his partnership connection with Mr. O'Conor. In 1839, he commenced alone, and, in 1843, Andrew Boardman, who had studied with him, became his partner. The firm of Benedict & Boardman is one of the most respected and prosperous, as it is, now, one of the oldest law firms in the city of New York. Owing to an impulsive temperament, Mr. Benedict's decisions are made promptly, yet, on account of his quick perceptions, they are almost invariably correct. Of late years he has practised but little at the bar, but his advice and counsel has been earnestly sought in a number of important cases. His cheerful disposition has made many a despondent client leave his office with a lighter heart. His soundness of judgment and thorough integrity, combined with an untiring industry, have given him the confidence of all with whom he comes in contact. While a student at law in 1831, away from his home and its restraints, and while exposed to the perils and temptations of a great city, he united with the Presbyterian church in Laight street, under the pastoral care of Rev. Dr. Cox. Since that period he has been an active Christian man, identified with what heretofore has been called the new school Presbyterian church; for many years an elder in the Madison Square Presbyterian church, also a member of the general assembly's board on church erection, and for many years its treasurer and secretary. He was, also, for a protracted period, a member of the general assembly's education Committee. These various duties were performed with that energy and skill which is habitual to the man. A close and critical student of the Bible, his best thoughts and hours of leisure have been bestowed upon it, and few have acquired greater skill and ability than he in explaining and applying the Word of God, or few are listened to with more delight and attention. Now (1870) in his 60th year, and in the enjoyment of good health, with ample means, and surrounded with nearly thirty children and grandchildren, he is spending the evening of his life in quiet and comfort at his delightful home at Audubon Park on the banks of the Hudson." Mrs. Kate Benedict Freeman died March 10, 1870. "Her schoolmates in Spingler Institute remember her as the life of the school. At more mature years she wielded a skillful pen, and was a frequent contributor to the columns of the N. Y. Observer. When the war broke out she found full scope for her warm heart, in visiting the hospitals and waiting on the wounded soldiers, reading to them, writing their letters, and in carrying them delicacies to tempt their capricious appetites. It is not yet two years since she entered upon the duties of a pastor's wife, with all the zeal of her earnest nature, laboring in season and out of season. With particular earnestness did she strive to win young souls to Jesus, yet with patient humility, bearing the bodily weakness that retarded her work, remembering that 'they also serve, who only stand and wait,' and so, she went trustingly 'from the shadow of this world's night into God's pure sunshine bright.'"

A few years later the house removed to the south-west corner of Wall and William streets, and has ever since that time been successfully engaged in the jewelry business. It is one of the best known, most enterprising and honorable houses of its kind in the city. Careful business habits, prompitude, and a perfect knowledge of their entire affairs, are the leading characteristics of the establishment.* Ch.

Nov., 1812 ; m. 2d, about 1814, Lavinia Moore of Winsted, Ct., and soon after moved to Western New York. He was for fifty-three years a member of the Methodist Episcopal church, and for twenty-five years discharged faithfully the duties of class leader and steward of the church. He became a local preacher at the age of sixty-eight. "We have never known a more remarkable instance of the brilliant as well as the mature Christian in one so far advanced in life. Naturally of a strong constitution, he retained his physical and mental faculties in almost the freshness and vigor of youth, and was a living illustration of the Psalmist's view of religion in life's decline, as portrayed in Psalms xcii, 12, 14. At the age of eighty-nine he would stand in the pulpit, and with countenance flushed with health, and beaming with love to man, with clear and strong voice, and his sermon in his heart, he would proclaim a Saviour willing to save the chief of sinners, and able to save to the uttermost. He retained his faculties remarkably to the very close of life, and was cheerful and social after eighty, as in middle age. His Christianity made him buoyant with hope, and the storms and afflictions of life — of which he had his share — were the background of the rainbow." He d. 1. Lieut. DANIEL[2] (Thomas[1]) Benedict was born at Southold, L. I., 165–, and after his removal to Norwalk, Ct., married Mary, dau. of Matthew[2] Marvin* of Norwalk, Ct. (Hall, p. 182). He was a soldier in the direful swamp fight, Dec. 19, 1675, a fight which has scarcely a parallel in the annals of ancient or modern warfare. At a town (Norwalk) meeting, Jan. 12, 1676: "The towne in consideration of the good service that the soldiers sent out of the towne ingaged and performed by them, and out of respect and thankfulness to the sayd soldiers, doe with one consent and freely give and grant to so many as were in the direful swamp fight twelve acors of land; and eight acors of land to so many as were in the next considerable service." Accordingly, there was granted by the plantation, as a gratuity unto Daniel Benedict, "being a souldier in the Indian warr twelfe acres of land and lyeth in three parcels."

* The Marvin Genealogy does not mention Mary among the children of Matthew,[2] but, as there was but one family of the name among the early settlers of Connecticut, and as I find in vol. V, p. 267, of Norwalk Deeds that property is recorded Feb. 15, 1722–3 to "Lieut. Daniel Benedict of Danbury on ye accompanyment of his brother, Matthew Marvin, deceased," I conclude that she was the daughter of Matthew[2] Marvin. (See Hall, p. 181, and Marvin Genealogy.)

(Hall, p. 63.) He sold his property in Norwalk, March 25, 1690, and moved to Danbury, Ct. The date of his death is not known. He was certainly living Feb. 15, 1722–3. His signature is attached to a deed bearing date Aug. 17, 1717. Norwalk Records. Ch.

Mrs. B. inherited the traditionary talent of the branch of the family to which she belonged. Her husband, Col. Joseph Platt Cooke, graduated at Yale College in 1750. He established himself in Danbury, Ct., and when the British, under Gen. Tryon, having landed at Compo

Point, on Long Island Sound, April 25, 1777, marched upon that place, he was Colonel of militia there. Upon the death of Gen. Wooster the command devolved upon Col. Cooke, the next in rank. "Col. Cooke was greatly esteemed, not only by the community, but by the leading men of the country. He enjoyed the friendship and confidence of Washington, and the acquaintance of Lafayette, Rochambeau and De Grasse, whom he entertained at his house. He was a member of Congress under the confederation, and subsequently filled the various offices of judge of the county court, judge of probate and member of the Governor's Council. His style of living was liberal. In manners and dress he was strongly marked with the Washingtonian era; he was sedate, courteous, methodical in all his ways; he wore breeches, knee-buckles, shoe-buckles, and a cocked hat to the last. The amenity and serenity of his countenance bespoke the refined gentleman and disciplined Christian." Feb. 16, 1763, Rhoda Bennet, b. 1743, and d. 1795; m. 2d, Jan. 18, 1796, Nabby Sheldon of Hartford, Ct., b. 1743, and d. Nov. 23, 1827. He was graduated at Nassau Hall College of New Jersey, in 1757; received the degree of Master of Arts, ad eundem, from Yale College, in 1760, and was a fellow of that institution from 1801 to 1812. He served as chaplain of 13th Regt., Ct. militia, from 1795 to 1812. Mr. B. was ordained as pastor of the first society in Woodbury, Oct. 22, 1760. He was a man of sound piety, and of great dignity and amiability of temper. He held an honored place in the affections of his people. He was successful as a spiritual teacher, and was followed to the tomb by his parishioners with hearts throbbing with grief. His church has been noted for the length of time it has enjoyed the services of its ministers. There is, perhaps, no other instance in the country where a church has been presided over by three pastors, as has been the case with this, for the long period of one hundred and forty-three years. Mr. B. was spoken of, during his life, and is still so remembered, as one of the fairest specimens of the good clergymen of Connecticut. Constitutionally, he had a well balanced mind; singularly discreet and exemplary in his every day deportment, and in all the relations of life; as a preacher and counsellor, he held a high rank. His temper was even, and his condition was placid and easy. Temptations, he was cautious, and even zealous to put, if possible, out of the way. He once had a favorite horse, young, sound, gentle, active and graceful; the animal was admired by his rider's parishioners. But Mr. Benedict, to the surprise of all, sold the horse. A neighbor expressed his astonishment at the event, and inquired the reason of it. "He was growing unruly," was the grave pastor's reply. "But I thought," said the man, "that he was a very orderly horse." "No," was the rejoinder; "he was growing quite unruly; he once got into the pulpit, and I thought it was time to part with him." Mr. Benedict was blessed in his family, and honored in the alliances of his children by marriage, and by their eminent usefulness and the distinctions to which they attained in public offices and employments. His people never desired his separation; death effected it April 20, 1813, at the age of seventy-six. He lives in the sweet and grateful remembrance of the aged in his parish and out of it; and the present generation of Woodbury have heard from the reverential and affectionate, the story of his goodness.* (Cothren's History Ancient Woodbury, pp. 301–304, see also p. 229.) His sermon delivered on the occasion of the death of Rev. Dr. Bellamy in 1790, was published with an appendix, in pamphlet form, and has since been republished in vol. I, Dr. Bellamy's works. * S. G. Goodrich, in his Recollections of a Life-time (p. 378, vol. II), says: "At length we departed from Durham, and took our way homeward, arriving at last at Woodbury. Here we remained a week or ten days, being hospitably entertained by the Rev. Noah Benedict, my brother-in-law's uncle. He lived in a large, low, old-fashioned house, embowered in elms, and having about it an air of antiquity, comfort, and repose. He was himself very aged — nearly eighty years old, I should judge. He was like my own lineage, of the orthodox faith, and sometimes officiated in the pulpit, though he had now a colleague. I need not describe him further than to say that he was a fine old man, greatly beloved by his parish, and almost adored by his immediate connections. Close by, in a sumptuous house, lived his son, Hon. Noah B. Benedict, then a leading lawyer of the state. Half a mile to the south, in an antique, gable-roofed mansion, dwelt his daughter, the wife of Nathaniel Smith, one of the judges of the supreme court, and regarded as the intellectual giant of his time."

1861. He grad. at Yale College in 1788, and was admitted to the bar in Litchfield Co., in 1792. He was appointed judge of probate in 1805, and resigned in 1816, on being elected an assistant (senator) or member of the council, which office he filled two years. He was elected a member of the house of representatives (Connecticut) in Oct., 1796, and reelected to ten sessions, subsequently, between this date and May, 1827. He was clerk of the house in 1809, and May, 1810. In the third week in June, 1831, Mr. Benedict came to Litchfield, to argue, among other cases, that of Fairman v. Bacon, 8 Connecticut Reports, 418. Just before that case came on, he was taken ill at his lodging, and could only send in the brief he had prepared. He was carried home, but survived only a few days. Judge Daggett, in giving the opinion of the court, in the case referred to, says he made "great use of the brief furnished by Mr. B., because he found it presented the argument in that dense, yet luminous view, for which that gentleman was so conspicuous, and by which the court were so often instructed and enlightened; and rarely more so than in this, one of his last efforts." His death occurred July 2, 1831, at the age of sixty years. He d. without issue. "He was honorably distinguished in his profession, courteous, affectionate and kind in his feeling, and endeared to the circle of his relatives and friends by his numerous virtues." Such is the modest record on his tombstone. He devised in his will the right of reversion to his homestead and some fifteen acres of valuable land, "to the 1st Congr. or Pres. Soc. of Woodbury, Ct." (Cothren's History Ancient Woodbury, pp. 306–7 and 357–8; see also pages 54 and 57 of Litchfield Co. Centennial Celebration, 8vo, pp. 212.)

RUTH, b. Jan 20, 1767; m. Jan. 11, 1789, Nathaniel Smith, and d. June 20, 1845. Judge Smith was by far the most distinguished native of the territory of "Ancient Woodbury;" an ornament to the town that gave him birth, to the profession which he adorned, to the bench on which he sat with unsullied purity, rectitude of purpose, and unbending devotion to the demands of justice, and to his friends who clustered thickly around him. He was admitted to the bar in 1787, and immediately after commenced the practice of his profession in Woodbury, where he continued to reside until his death, March 9, 1822. Almost immediately he rose to eminence in his profession. Some of his first arguments were masterly forensic efforts. In October, 1789, he was elected a member of the General Assembly, and was reelected four times previous to 1795. In the house he was a distinguished member, and took a leading part in it. Yale college bestowed, in 1795, the honorary degree of A. M. In the same year he was elected a member of the congress of the United States, in which office he served four years, when he declined a second reelection. He particularly distinguished himself in the discussions in congress relating to the ratification of the British treaty. In 1799, elected to a seat in the council, or upper house of the legislature of Connecticut, and remained a member of this body till May, 1805. In Oct., 1806, he was elected a judge of the supreme court, and remained in this position till 1819. Judge Smith was b. Jan. 6, 1762, and d. March 9, 1822. (See Cothren's Hist. Ancient Woodbury; also, Goodrich's Recollections of a Life-time, vol. I, pp. 338–392.) Ch.

Hinman says "that at the time he was taken prisoner, one half of his company being with him, were also taken — the other half then being in Fort Lee, on the other bank of the Hudson. The prisoners, excepting officers, were confined in the sugar house, in New York. The cruelties inflicted upon them are the theme of conversation among their relatives to this day. The detail of the sufferings was communicated to their friends by the survivors, Sergt. [Jonah] Benedict and Stephen Bump. Col. Joseph Barnum, the father of one of these sufferers learned from them that, for many days, his son, having been deprived of food and drink, literally died of hunger in the act of attempting to bite a brick, and with a piece of brick-in his mouth," etc. (See Hinman's Connecticut in the Revolution, pp. 137, 168, 208, 234, 587.) He was put on board the prison-ship Grosvenor, lying at the Wallabout, from which he was removed to the old sugar house, and there confined, suffering great hardships from sickness and ill-usage, until permitted to depart, being then, April, 1777, considered at the point of death. He was carried to Danbury, Ct., in a horse litter, about two weeks before Danbury was burnt by the British. He, and his old father Matthew, who was living in Jonah's house, were taken out of their beds before daylight on Sunday morning, April 27, 1777, and tied to trees in his garden, while the British troops set fire to his house (a new one). For damages to his property he was allowed £309 9*s.* 8*d.* by state of Connecticut, in May, 1792. He received in the distribution of his father's estate, £158 12*s.* 4*d.* (*Danbury Prob. Aug. 27, 1777, and d. June 24, 1852, at Norwalk, Ohio; m. 2d, Lavinia P. Benton of Republic, Ohio, June 17, 1866. He was collector of the town of Danbury, 1812 and 1813. He left his native place in January, 1817, with a one-horse wagon, and reached Ohio, in the following March, in company with his brother-in-law, Samuel Darling, of New York; immediately built a log house, and, leaving a man to clear up a few acres of his land, returned to Connecticut for his family. In July, 1817, he again left Danbury with his wife, three sons and two daughters, their means of transportation being a large wagon drawn by a yoke of oxen, a one-horse wagon and one saddle horse. This was necessarily a tedious journey, and the family plodded along for two months through the wilderness, but at length reached Norwalk in September. He found that his house had been burned during his absence, and immediately put up another of unhewn logs, and into this moved his heroic family. In 1818, Mr. Benedict built a frame barn, the first frame building in the township, and in the following year a brick house, in which he lived until his death. In 1818, the first religious meeting of Norwalk was held in his house. In 1832, Mr. Benedict planted the first apple orchard, and introduced the first improved stock — Devon cattle and merino sheep. He also obtained some agricultural implements, which had hitherto been unknown in that community. He lived (says the Cleveland Leader) to reap the reward of his labors, and to gather about him, surrounded by peace and plenty, his children, and his children's children, even to the third and fourth generations. He possessed the most remarkable vitality for one so advanced in years, it being a frequent occurrence for him to harness his horse when he wished to ride, and even the night before his death, he was able to be in his office and attend to matters of business. He attended the Grand Encampment of Masons at Toledo, a few days since, and the illness which caused his death is attributed to over exertion and a cold which he contracted at that time. He connected himself with the Masonic fraternity in 1811, and ever after was a prominent and active member. He held many offices in the order of trust and honor, the duties of which he invariably discharged with the utmost fidelity. He also held several civil offices, which he adorned by the strictest adherence to principle, always proving himself eminently worthy of the trust confided in him. He held the office of postmaster from 1818 to 1828, when he was removed by Gen. Jackson; was elected justice of the peace in 1828 and 1831, and mayor in 1835, 1840, 1845 and 1856. Upon the organization of the Fire Lands Historical Society in 1857, he was chosen its president, and so faithfully did he perform his duties that he was reelected every succeeding year, and held the office at the time of his death. He was always prompt in his attendance, and was one of its most active and efficient members, contributing greatly, in various ways, to its prosperity. The Fire Lands' Pioneer thus speaks of his departure: "Died at his residence, in Norwalk, Oct. 25, 1866, PLATT BENEDICT, the venerable President of the Fire Lands Historical Society, aged 91 years, 7 months and 7 days. The patriarch is gone! The intelligence will fall on many ears with a sad and mournful interest. The citizens of the Fire Lands have regarded with filial affection, and in his declining years almost with reverence, the venerable man, who, for half a century, has been the pioneer settler of Norwalk. Like a 'shock of corn fully ripe,' he has closed his eventful career, and as he sleeps amid the beautiful groves planted by his hands, may his memory be held in grateful remembrance by this whole community, who enjoys the fruits of his labors. * * * The sermon at the funeral of the deceased was delivered by Rev. Mr. Marks of Huron." Ch.

In 1816 he returned to Connecticut, visited his friends in Litchfield, was taken ill, and, after a week's confinement, died Feb. 25. He was buried at L. 27. AARON[6] (Aaron,[5] Daniel,[4] Daniel,[3] Daniel,[2] Thomas[1]), b. Aug. 9, 1785; m. Sept. 17, 1808, Charlotte, dau. Abel and Hannah (Elliot) Porter, b. Oct. 29, 1789, at Middletown, Ct. "At an early age he entered Yale College, but was compelled (after remaining eighteen months) to leave on account of ill health. A sea voyage, and following the plow every working day for three months, were the means of restoring his health in some measure, but not considering it safe to pursue a course of study, he went, in 1804, to Waterbury, and formed a partnership with Joseph Burton, in mercantile business, which was carried on until 1812. He then commenced the manufacture of bone buttons, but this business after several years trial proving unsatisfactory, he became associated with others in a project to manufacture gilt buttons, Mr. B. being general partner and sole manager of the concern. The prosperity of Waterbury, and its fame as a manufacturing town, date from the establishment of this branch of industry. A new partnership, in 1827, was succeeded in 1829 by another (Benedict & Coe), with increased capital. The new firm rolled brass for the market, and ever after, this has been an important branch of the business. The copartnership of Benedict & Coe expiring Feb. 10, 1834, a new one was formed, with a capital of $40,000, under the name of Benedict & Burnham. Mr. Benedict's skill and prudence carried the firm through the intervening period, including the crises of 1837 and 1839, to January 14, 1843, when it became a joint stock corporation, under the name of The Benedict & Burnham Manufacturing Co., with a capital of $100,000. The capital stock of this company has been increased from time to time, till the present nominal capital is $400,000, and the shares would sell readily at more than double this sum. Mr. Benedict was chosen president of the company in 1843, at its formation, which office he still holds. He is also director in several other joint stock companies in the town, and also of the principal bank. He was member of the state legislature (house) 1826 and 1841, and 1858–9, was senator. For many years he has been a Deacon of the First Congregational church of Waterbury, and his name appears among the principal donors to the building fund of the new Divinity Hall in New Haven, the corner stone of which was laid Sept. 22, 1869. Mr. Benedict is also endowing a professorship in Iowa College. Mr. and Mrs. Benedict celebrated the sixtieth anniversary of their wedding, on the 17th of Sept., 1868, and are still comparatively free from the infirmities of age, and take a lively interest in the current events of the day." 30. James[6] (Jonah,[5] Matthew,[4] Daniel,[3] Daniel,[2] Thomas[1]), b. Sept. 30, 1784; m. May, 1812, Deborah, youngest dau. James Coles of New York, a dry goods merchant. Mr. Coles was a lineal descendant of one of the original settlers, three brothers Coles, of Long Island. (See Thompson's Hist. L. I., vol. II, Appendix.) She was b. Sept. 8, 1792, and resides at Tarrytown. "James, at an early age, entered his father's hat factory, and later he was, also, apprenticed to his uncle Zadock, and worked in his factory until he became well acquainted with the business. Energetic and ambitious, he thought Danbury, Ct., and South Salem poor fields for enterprise, and, therefore, in 1804, he went to New York and entered the employ of Tweedy & Hoyt, manufacturers and dealers in hats and furs, 37 Maiden Lane. He soon gained the confidence and esteem of his employers, and upon the death of Mr. Hoyt, became a partner. About 1810, they rebuilt their store on the old site, and continued there for many years doing a large and successful business. Mr. Tweedy remained at Danbury, Ct., and superintended the large manufactory they had erected there, while Mr. Benedict managed the store in New York, their southern branches, and the business generally. Upon the breaking out of the war of 1812, Mr. Benedict promptly offered his services to the Governor of the state, and was commissioned, June 19, 1812, 1st Lieut., 11th Regt., 1st Brig., Art'y. He served with his regiment during the war, being promoted Captain. He was stationed during the greater part of the war at the forts in New York harbor. After the peace, he continued in the state military service, and rapidly rose to Col., and Brig.-Gen. of Art'y (commission as Brig.-Gen. dated June 27, 1823), until, in March 23, 1826, he was made Maj.-Gen., and placed in command of 2d Div. N. Y. State Art'y. Gen. Benedict took a deep interest in politics; being an intimate friend of De Witt Clinton, he was his staunch supporter and an earnest advocate of the Erie Canal. He was sent to the legislature in 1824. It was during this session that a strong opposition to the measures of De Witt Clinton sprang up, culminating in the passage by large majorities in both houses of the resolution, removing him from his office as canal commissioner. Although the legislature was almost unanimous in this matter, Gen. Benedict stood up almost alone and manfully defended him. Upon the final vote, Gen. B. and one other member recorded their votes against Clinton's removal. A revolution in public sentiment made De Witt Clinton Governor of the state, and Gen. B. was the only member of the legislature of 1824 who was returned by his constituents in 1825. Thurlow Weed, in his Reminiscences, published in the New York Times, in winter of 1866, spoke of Gen. B. 'as a worthy and excellent man.' After his second term in the legislature, he retired from public life, and, March 4, 1829, resigned his commission as Maj.-Gen. The firm of Tweedy & Benedict was dissolved, 1826–7, Samuel Tweedy retiring.* Gen. B. continued business until 1830, under the name of James Benedict & Co., when he removed to an estate he had purchased at Tarrytown, where he resided until his death, July 23, 1841. He was, through his maternal grandmother, a lineal descendant of Hendrik Hudson." Ch.

31. ZADOCK[6] (Abijah,[5] Matthew,[4] Daniel,[3] Daniel,[2] Thomas[1]), b. Aug. 6, 1791; m. July 3, 1823, Sarah, dau. James and Elizabeth (Hopkins) Tibbetts of Huntersland, Schoharie Co. He removed with his father to Albany (now Greene) Co., thence to Westerlo, and finally settled, in 1819, in Berne. He was engaged in mercantile business about 25 years. Was an elder in the Reformed church. He d. March 2, 1870, at West Berne; we quote from closing remarks at his funeral, by his pastor, Rev. E. Miller; "Mark the perfect man, and behold the upright; for the end of that man is peace." (Psalms xxxvii, 37.) "Mr. Benedict needs no eloquence of man or any delineation on our part to put forth his character in its true light, so as to appropriate the text. For an age he has been known to us in every capacity. His life and character has been commented upon in your family circles, and in your interchange of neighborly courtesies. To illustrate the nobleness of man, and the reality of the Christian religion, he has stood as a polished column, among the fallen, decayed timbers of corrupt society and frail human nature around him. His name was a common synonym for integrity in things pertaining to God and man. * * * His religion was without ostentation, it was continuous, faithful and onward, as a living reality within him. He was unselfish, perfect and upright in all his business transactions. All were impressed with his dignified bearing and gentlemanly demeanor. We all felt we must be respectful in his presence. * * * The church and the community at large have sustained a painful loss, but there is left the consolation of a heavenly legacy, of his many Christian virtues and precious memory." 44. Rev. GEORGE[7] (Stephen Bronson,[6] Lemuel,[5] Daniel,[4] Daniel,[3] Daniel,[2] Thomas[1]), b. April 15, 1795, at Danbury, Ct.; m. March 30, 1816, Nancy, dau. Jonathan Force of N. J., b. March 24, 1795, and d. Nov. 18, 1864, in New York. Mr. Benedict was for many years a successful minister of Christ, and his memory is held in blessed remembrance. He was at one time settled in Danbury, Ct. The following is taken from an obituary notice of him: "The Rev. Mr. Benedict was distinguished as one of the most popular and successful preachers in the denomination to which he belonged. The Union Baptist church was the first with which he sustained the pastoral relation in this city (N. Y.), and under his ministrations soon outgrew its place of worship, and erected the church on Stanton street ; that house proved inadequate to accommodate the congregation he attracted, and eventually the communicants could not find room. Necessity thus compelled a portion of the church to withdraw, which they did with him as their pastor, and purchased the church on the corner of Norfolk and Broome streets, which church he saw burned to the ground a short time before he died. The congregation built on Norfolk street, and in a few years sold to the Methodists, and is now flourishing up town as the 5th Avenue Baptist church. The character of Rev. Mr. Benedict was distinguished for its gentleness, meekness and patience, and yet possessed of sufficient firmness to resist the encroachments of error. As a pastor he was to the aged a companion and friend, to the young an example and adviser; as a preacher he was faithful and prayerful, admonishing his hearers with an earnestness that made him eloquent, and a kindness that would have been closed against denunciations. As a man he was kind, forgiving, compassionate and just. In the social circle his cheerful disposition rendered him the joy of the household." He d. Mr. Johnson was born in England, and came to this country in 1795. "Mr. Benedict has, since 1833, been engaged in various business enterprises, but mainly in connection with those companies growing out of the business originally established by his father. He is at this time treasurer, and, for about twenty years past, has had the general and principal management of the business of The Benedict & Burnham Manufacturing Co., which, during this period, has increased about three fold. He is now (1870) President of the three other Joint Stock Manufacturing Cos., which have grown out of enterprizes started in direct connection with the business of the old company, all of which are doing a large and prosperous business. He was one of the original projectors, and is still connected with the extensive manufactory of gas fixtures, clocks, bronzes, etc., in the city of New York, under the firm name of Mitchell, Vance & Co. This company now employ about four hundred men, and turn out as beautiful and artistic work as the best found in the old world. Mr. Benedict is, at this time, president of the Detroit and Lake Superior Copper Company, which owns and runs the smelting works at Detroit and Houghton, and which has the past year, under the efficient management of John R. Grout, Esq., smelted and refined over 22,000,000 pounds of copper, the product of Lake Superior mines. Not having a taste for political life, Mr. Benedict has never sought its honors. He was, however, chosen member of Waterbury common council, 1854–5, alderman 1859–60, and was elected mayor in 1860. He was one of a colony which, in 1852, went out from the First Congregational Church of Waterbury to form a second church, and he was chosen a Deacon, which office he still holds." Ch.

49. THEODORE HUDSON[7] (James,[6] Jonah,[5] Matthew,[4] Daniel,[3] Daniel,[2] Thomas[1]), b. March 13, 1821, in New York City.

"He was educated at Yale College, and grad. with high honors in the class of 1841. In 1845 he received the degree of A. M. He had fine intellectual gifts; but, as he has written merely for amusement, his writings consist only of fugitive pieces in prose and verse, which have never been collected for publication. Being naturally of a retiring disposition, and left in affluent circumstances by the death of his father, which occurred just after he had taken his degree at college, he has led a very quiet and retired life, devoting himself to literary pleasures, and of late years to the care of the family estate at Tarrytown, where he has always resided. He has never married. In 1842 he was obliged to seek health in foreign travel. Returning home about the time of the nomination of Henry Clay for president, he became interested in politics, and identified himself with the whig party. In the autumn of 1850, he consented to accept the whig nomination for member of Assembly, and was elected by a large majority, although his district had always before given heavy democratic majorities. He was one of the leading members in the Assembly chamber, although the youngest member of the legislature of 1851, and identified himself with several of the prominent bills passed that session. He was chairman of the committee on public schools, and was much complimented upon the report he made to the assembly on that subject. In the autumn of 1851, he received the whig nomination for state senator from Westchester, Rockland and Putnam counties, and the New York Times (which had then but just entered upon its career), came out with a long editorial article upon his nomination, complimenting him and the nominating convention in strong terms. He was compelled, however, to decline the nomination, on account of ill health. In the spring of 1852 he was elected delegate to the whig national convention, which sat in Baltimore (the last national convention the whig party ever held), and which nominated Gen. Winfield Scott for president of the United States. In the autumn of that year he was again compelled to seek health in other climates, and accompanied his brother, James Milton Benedict, on an extended tour in the West Indies. Since that time he has been connected with the republican party, but has not mingled in political matters otherwise than by correspondence. During the rebellion of the southern states he devoted his means and influence to the raising and equipping of volunteers for the Union army from his county."

50. JAMES[8] (James Milton,[7] James,[6] Jonah,[5] Matthew,[4] Daniel,[3] Daniel,[2] Thomas[1]), b. May 16, 1842; m. Dec. 6, 1865, Sarah Huntington, eldest child of Francis Marlborough Babcock, merchant, New York, b. May 14, 1844. In 1863 he accompanied his regiment, 7th New York S. N. G., to the war, and after the battle of Gettysburg was a member of 3d Corps, Army of the Potomac, the 7th N. Y., having been brigaded with the 2d Division, 3d A. C. The regiment, however, was soon after detached and ordered back to New York City to quell the draft riots of July and August, 1863. March 1, 1864, he engaged in business under the firm name of Faucett & Benedict, which firm became, Feb. 1, 1867, Faucett, Benedict & Co. Res. New York. Ch.

"He removed, when about eight years old, with his parents to the then almost unbroken wilderness of Ohio, settling on the banks of Alum Creek, Morrow Co. His advantages for acquiring knowledge, were, of course, very limited, yet by devoting his spare moments to assiduous study, he obtained quite a liberal education. Language was his favorite study, and besides gaining a thorough knowledge of the English tongue, he made considerable progress in Latin. He early manifested a taste for literary pursuits, and was the author of a number of poems as well as prose articles on various topics. He was energetic, resolute, and of undaunted courage. In vindicating the cause of humanity and justice, he hazarded property, reputation, and even life. In him, the afflicted and oppressed of every class, found a true and sympathizing friend; but the poor, despised, downtrodden and oppressed African, especially, was the object of his philanthropy. Every effort in his power was put forth to relieve the sufferings of the race, and relieve them from cruel bondage. His house was one of the principal depots on the through line of the 'underground rail road,' from the Ohio river to Canada. Hundreds of poor fugitives have been fed and lodged beneath his roof, and when the curse of slavery was wiped from our land, by that glorious and crowning act of the immortal Lincoln — the emancipation proclamation — he did not fold his hands, but redoubled his efforts in relieving the wants of the suffering freedmen. So conscientious was he in regard to slavery, that he would neither use nor allow to be used in his family any article which was the product of the unrequited labor of the slave. Mr. Benedict was, also, a firm advocate of temperance, and of all the other reforms of the age. An ardent admirer of nature, he took great delight in collecting curious and rare specimens from her laboratory. He was for many years an eminent minister in the Society of Friends, and made several extended journeys in the service of the society. He was attacked with paralysis of the brain in the autumn of 1866, and d. at Peru, Ohio, on the 25th of 6th mo., 1867, triumphant in the faith of Christ." [Communicated by his son, Griffith G. Benedict of Peru, Ohio.] Ch.
